2,500,000 R. R. WORKERS DEMAND MINIMUM WAGE OF $2,500

RAILMEN ASK QUICK RELIEF

Declare $2,500 Yearly the Least That Will Support a Family in Decency

By International News Service.

Washington, May 8.—The railroad brotherhoods and unions, through their representative, W. Jett Lauck, consulting economist, today presented a demand to the Federal railroad labor board for a minimum wage of $2,500 a year for every one of the 2,500,000 railroad employes.

Lauck declared that $2,500 a year is the very least upon which an American family can live in decency, with living costs as they are.

ASKS IMMEDIATE RELIEF.

He asked that immediate relief be granted on this issue and to make quick action possible that the board curtail its examination of wage data and proceed immediately to the determination of the question of what constitutes a living wage.

He declared that the combined increases asked, amounting to more than a billion dollars a year, would cause no appreciable boost in the cost of living when the railroad companies increased rates proportionately to meet them, provided profiteers were not allowed to take advantage of the situation.

Lauck's move, following his presentation of a survey of wages, prices and profits full of astounding revelations of profiteering, caused a sensation. For nearly four weeks the board has been hearing demands of the workers for increases which, in the majority of cases would not have brought wages anywhere near made more unbearable by unscrupulous landlords.

BANKERS WILL DISCUSS BUILDING HOMES AT LOW RENTS

NEW PLAN TO BALK GOUGERS

It is planned to form a financial association or corporation with several millions of working capital, available for the building of new dwelling houses or for the development of dwelling house property.

While the details will not be worked out until the financial question is settled, Mayor Peters declared he thought the houses for one, two or three families, will be sold to people in need of them by making monthly payments, the same as rent.

For those who can afford it, he thought, a lump sum payment of part of the cost of the building will be required together with succeeding monthly payments until the tenant comes into possession of his home.

"The project is not philanthropic," the Mayor declared. "I believe it is good business and will be so appreciated by men whose prosperity is vitally a part of the prosperity of the city.

SEES TROUBLE COMING.

"The building of dwelling houses in Boston is practically at a standstill. There is great difficulty in securing construction loans and extraordinary measures are necessary if in the next few years the city is to meet the legitimate needs of its inhabitants."

The mayor declared that ten of the city's leading bankers are to be present at a meeting in his office and that they will be requested at this meeting to form an association or corporation to finance the building operations.

For the study of the best types of houses and the best available sites, the City Council has already appropriated $2,500 with the mayor's approval. Speedy action looking toward the overcoming of the house shortage is expected to follow the first meeting of Boston's bankers, who have been made aware, through the American's campaign, of the importance to the city's prosperity of proper housing accommodations for all the people. It has been predicted that unless something is done quickly thousands will be homeless next Winter.

Tenants Quit Hearing in Dispute Over Rent

After a dispute over rents, lasting two hours, in which Herbert E. Ellis of the Mayor's Committee on Rents and Housing attempted to effect a conciliation, eight tenants left the hearing before the committee at No. 1 Beacon street, declaring they would not agree with their landlord, David Tabrisky of No. 328 Blue Hill avenue, Roxbury.

The hearing at times became so heated and complicated that it looked as if the deliberations between Landlord Tabrisky and his two attorneys and the eight tenants would end in violence.

OWNER REJECTS $1 RAISE.

The tenants are occupants of the block of four houses owned by Tabrisky, Nos. 109-11-13 and 115 Lawrence avenue, Roxbury. Two young lawyers represented the landlord and refused to accept a proffered increase of $1 a month, suggested by Mr. Ellis.

"I consider the suggestion of $1 a month an unwarranted suggestion," said one of the lawyers.

"Yes, it is unethical conduct," said the other. "And I will not stand here and hear the legal profession castigated."

"This is not a court, and there is no need of getting excited," Mr. Ellis said. "The committee makes no pretensions as to the legal technicalities of the law. All we want to do is to come simply to some some agreement equitable to landlord and tenant."

DISPUTE LANDLORD.

Tabrisky claimed to have paid $7,400 for each of the four houses, $30,000 in all, but tenants disputed this and argued that the actual purchase price was $24,000. It was estimated that Tabrisky's net income from the four houses after paying $379 for maintenance and expenses was only $678 a year.

Tenants contradicted this statement and promised to prove to the committee that the purchase price was $4,000 less than represented. They also promised to show that the landlord's profits were greater than he said they were.

After the wrangle Mr. Ellis was obliged to suggest that the tenants retain a lawyer to meet the attorneys representing the landlord.

Captain E. J. McDonald, chaplain at the Charlestown Navy Yard, will leave for Washington tomorrow night, to attend a conference of chaplains of the Navy.

Mothers' Day to Be Observed Tomorrow

American flags and red, white and blue ribbons will, to a large extent, take the place of flowers in the observance of Mothers' Day tomorrow.

From Washington, the headquarters of the movement, it was announced that owing to the high cost of flowers the movement to wear flags and ribbons has spread to all sections of the United States.

There are some, however, who still stick to the time honored bright flowers if the mother is still in the home, and white carnations if she has passed beyond.

without disorder, according to reports reaching here today. The State Department of War has been removed from Cordoba to Vera Cruz, and according to the reports rebel activity throughout the State is increasing.

The customs guard at Nuevo Laredo has declared for the revolutionists and the Pan-American Railway from Chihuahua to the Guatemalan border is held by the revolutionists.

Mexican Revolution Plot Hatched in Paris

Paris, May 8.—The statement that the preliminary plot for the present Mexican revolution was hatched in Paris was made by a high official of the Mexican Embassy here, who added that the whole secret plan was known in advance by President Carranza.

The Mexican President, however, it is averred, refused to heed the urgent warnings of his ambassador to France, Senor Pani, and that the whole of Mexico would flare into revolt as soon as the presidential campaign opened.

The information mentions the following as being chiefly concerned in the alleged plot:

FINANCED BY ITURBE.

Francisco Iturbe, millionaire backer of General Angeles, who joined the Villa junta here immediately after hearing the news of the General's execution in Chihuahua. Iturbe, who previously held aloof from revolutionary quarrels, it is said to have also incensed by the putting to death of his protege that he guaranteed to finance the group planning to overthrow Carranza.

Jose Dias, Mexican rubber king, cousin of Porfirio Diaz, whose estate in Yucatan and Tehuantepec were confiscated my Carranza.

Ramon Garcia, who acted as adjutant to the late Victoriano Huerta.

Jesus Yonacio Mirimas, millionaire banker of Mexico City, who fled there following the Madero revolution and has been living since in a palace in the Avenue Victor Hugo, Passy.

Juan Estradas, Mexican song writer, who attained considerable success with his operettas in Madrid, where he is making his home.

LIMANTOU IN PLOT.

Jose Limantou, Minister of Finance in the Diaz regime, is also concerned in the plot, but has taken no conspicuous publically denied this, stating he had refused to enter into any conspiracy, but there is little doubt that because he felt he was too old, and was unwilling to concern himself further in Mexican affairs.

Francisco de la Barra, former President of Mexico, though not denying knowledge of the plot, said he had no details of it and had never been asked to join the alleged conspirators. The Villa junta met, it is said, in a lavishly furnished apartment near the Eiffel Tower, a stone's throw from the residence of Ambassador Geraldo Aznlir, Carranza's foreign minister, while he was visiting Europe.

PLOTTERS FLED PARIS.

Aguilar, I am assured, refused to join the plotters, stating he was and would remain loyal to Carranza. He is he who is said to have informed the Mexican Embassy, which in turn informed the Carranza Government with the facts. The Mexican President, it is said, let the matter rest.

When word got abroad that the plot had been discovered, Iturbe, Mirimas and Garcia left Paris, presumably for Spain.

Jose Dias is going to London, where he is now the head of the English branch of the revolutionary junta, the office of which, according to the informant, is to replace the clenifico and restore the iron reign that was held by Porfirlorio Diaz.

Reveal Carranza Plot to Hold Office Indefinitely

Washington, May 8.—Disclosure of a plot whereby General Venustiano Carranza, President of Mexico, hoped to retain in power definitely, despite his repeated assurances that he would abide by the result of "fair" elections, was made here today.

Carranza formally stated on numerous occasions that he favored the holding of a national election for the purpose of naming his successor. He stated that Senator Bonillas, the Mexican ambassador to the United States, would be his choice for the office. According to Carranza, the entire supporting of the government was to be thrown to Bonillas in the elections, thereby practically assuring the latter's success.

It was disclosed today, however, that Bonillas, under the terms of the election constitution, was not eligible as a candidate for the Mexican presidency, and even if elected through the support of Carranza could have been deposed.

It was stated by Obregon headquarters that Bonillas had twice taken the oath of allegiance to the United States, having served as a secretary to Governor Safford of Arizona and as a judge in another United State.

Hence, Carranza could raise the seemingly indisputable point of law against Bonillas that specifically forbids anyone holding office who has taken the oath of allegiance to a foreign country, deport Bonillas and continue his reign as provisional head. At the Obregon headquarters it was declared that the plot was conceived by Carranza's advisers and agreed to by Bonillas, who is now in Mexico.

HALE ADMITS OMISSIONS

Maine Senator Says Criticisms of Him He Deleted From Records "Immaterial"

Washington, May 8.—Chairman Hale of the Senate naval investigating sub-committee admitted altering the official record of the committee's inquiry by deleting certain remarks by Senator Pittman, Nevada, Democrat, which were critical of Hale's method of conducting the investigation.

Senator Hale's admission came during the hearing when Senator Pittman registered a protest against the action of Senator Hale in ordering the official stenographer to delete a remark by Pittman.

"I did not consider the matter material," Senator Hale explained. "If there is any blame attached for omission of the remarks, it is on my shoulders and not on the official reporter."

The dark bircken on the case to the effect that "there appears to be one man here for the majority and another for the minority," made two years ago when Senator Hale suspended his examination of the witness to permit a question from Senator Delaware, Republican, but denied the same right to Senator Pittman, a Democrat, who wished to ask a question on the point when under discussion.

Senator Benson resumed the stand and declared that Admiral Sims has an exaggerated idea of his mission in London. His interpretary Daniels which precipitated the present investigation was most decidedly unfortunate." Admiral Benson told the committee.

"SALLIES" GET MONEY BEFORE DRIVE OPENS

First contributions to the Salvation Army Home Service fund drive which open next Monday, began to flow into New England headquarters at No. 67 Milk street, today. They were small ones—a dollar from a little girl in Sharon, a $5 bill from a woman, not a prominent resident of Greater Boston, who was once "down but not out," and received aid at one of the Salvation Army hospitals. With them were a half-dozen others.

Each day, showing that the fund they were from relatives and friends of men who knew the "Sallies" overseas.

ORGANIZED GANG BLAMED FOR KIDNAPINGS

New York, May 8.—The theory advanced that an organized gang is responsible for the disappearance of a number of young girls from their homes here, is being considered by the police. Another girl was added to the list today when Dorothy Gertrude Wilder, 15, appealed to the police to seek their daughter, who has been missing from home since April 18.

Ilsenrietta Bulte, the 15-year-old daughter of a cigar manufacturer, for whom an extended search has been made for weeks, is still missing.

N. E. PROFESSIONAL WOMEN TO CONVENE

Prominent women from all over New England will attend the convention of the New England Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs in Springfield, June 11 to 13. The program will include an Italian reception, two business sessions, a vocational luncheon and a banquet, at which Miss Lena M. Phillips, executive secretary of the organization, will preside. Arrangements are in charge of Miss Florence Cordis Austin, Cervantes Building, Springfield.

WANT TO RETAIN HISTORIC NAMES

Worcester, May 8.—Former members of the Emmet Guards and Wellington Rifles are incensed on what they call dictatorial methods of the State military authorities, who have refused to let them carry the flag of Worcester's military companies. The Rifles are now one battalion of Infantry in Worcester, the companies to be known as A, B, C and D. The Emmet Guards and Wellington Rifles would be included in that battalion. Former members of the Wellington Rifles met last night and a flag committee was appointed to see what, if any, action can be obtained in the matter.

LUDENDORFF RETURNS TO HIS BERLIN HOME

Berlin, May 7.—General Ludendorff has returned to his residence in Victoriastrasse after a protracted five-weeks' absence. His whereabouts have been unknown in Berlin, and it is popularly supposed he has been in hiding for fear of investigation in connection with the Von Kapp episode.

BAE LEGGED WOMEN BARRED AT CONEY

New York, May 8.—Women's bare legs are to be frowned upon at Coney Island this Summer, Captain Sackett of the Coney Island Police Station said.

Women will have to wear stockings, long ones, too, regardless of the high cost of high stockings. Sock or half hose will not be tolerated. Shimmy-shirts, also, will come under police ban. Women police are to patrol the beach to see that offenders are brought promptly to book.

WILL WED BIGANIST TO "REFORM" HIM

Chicago, May 8.—After a man has served a term in the penitentiary for having six wives, will another marriage reform him? Mrs. Mary May Dunbar said that it would and she announced she would marry Jesse Otley Gibbe, who is now serving a sentence for failing to divorce four of his six wives.

Congress to Loaf as Delegates Work

By International News Service.

Washington, May 8.—The work of Congress until after the national conventions is practically completed. Leaders reached a tentative agreement today for a recess beginning June 5, to last during the conventions.

House leaders have determined to maintain the House in session after May 15 under a gentlemen's agreement to act on conference reports, but to take up no new legislation. A deficiency appropriation bill, to be acted upon by the House, is the last legislation that body will act upon before the convention.

When Congress reconvenes after the conventions it will probably face a considerable legislative program. It is expected that the conventions will instruct Congress to act upon legislation providing a bonus for men who served during the war.

MERCHANT MARINE POLICY.

The merchant marine policy of the nation will probably be determined by legislation before next Fall, and there is pressure for action upon legislation to control the packing industry.

The President is believed to have some legislative recommendations to make to Congress before he leaves office, and Democratic leaders would like to obtain action upon his recommendations before the Fall adjournment.

Party leaders may also find work for Congress to do after the conventions. Some of the platform planks may have to be securely spiked down by legislation.

the $2,500 mark, and there had been no inkling that the unions would make a definite demand for the setting of a uniform minimum living wage.

"PUBLIC IS WEARY."

"The public is weary, just as we are weary, of past opportunist policies in the wage adjustment, of half-way compromises, devised to meet a situation temporarily without regard to fundamental principles," said Lauck.

"The public wishes the railroad wage controversy settled speedily, equitably and on a long time, far-seeing basis.

"We challenge any one to deny that flagrant, indefensible profiteering has been the result of unregulated capital and middlemen, both since and during the war, and that the public has been at the mercy of these and at the mercy of insatiable speculators and conscienceless financial leaders, and that the grossest have been the result and not the cause of price increases or that the increasing power of the railroad labor is actually less than it was before the war.

BASED ON U. S. FIGURES.

He said the unions', request for a minimum wage of $2,500 was based on the investigation of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, showing that a family of five today needs $2,583 a year to live with a minimum degree of comfort.

Lauck said there was now effective anti-profiteering legislation before Congress, placed there by the President. He urged the board to recommend the establishments of government price-fixing agencies like the fuel and food administrations during war industries board.

"To control other industries as your board now controls railroads and railroad labor."

DUCHESS DISLIKES AMERICAN FOOD

New York, May 8.—Having made a journey though the United States, the noble Duchess of Clermont-Fernont, is now writing a book to reveal her impressions. Copies have just been received here.

The fastidious food taste of the noble lady found little to satisfy in this benighted country. The hams of Virginia, red bannans and California oranges, the apples the Lady had, but for the rest her scorn is unutterable. Here are some of the frightful details:

"American butter is poor and American cheese cannot be eaten. American chickens are scrawny and emaciated, and one has the feeling that it is cruelty to eat a knife into them. All American dishes have passed through cold storage and are insipid."

GET 3 IN $20,000 LIQUOR RAID

Former Police Chief of West Springfield One of Trio Arraigned in Federal Court

West Springvale, May 8.—Former Chief of Police Patrick J. Welch, now of the Boston & Albany Railroad police, and two other men, were arraigned before United States Commissioner Rice today in connection with the seizure of 1,320 quarts of bottled in bond whiskey, valued at $20,000.

The liquor, 110 cases, was found in a coal bin in the home of John Camp and Sons, consigned to Welch, Camp and Sons, consigned to Welch, according to Special Agent William A. Whalen, assisted by Michael Rohan of the Internal Revenue Department.

Camp, Jacob Levine, a chauffeur, charged with driving a truck on which the whiskey was brought from New York, and Welch were the men arraigned with Welch.

The whiskey was bottled by H. B. Kirk & Company of New York, according to stencil marks on the cases, and was consigned to H. C. Bliss of Saugatuck, Conn. The seals show that the whiskey was bottled in 1913, and the police are mystified as to how it was taken from bond.

Jacob Lady of New York claimed that the liquor was his property, and that he had paid the Government for it, but was unable to produce evidence that was sufficiently to have full faith in his claim.

DU PONTS MAKE WAR ON WOOD

To Quit Campaign Unless Senator Moses Stops Fight Against Dye Bill

Washington, May 8.—An amazing attempt to influence legislation in Congress by offers of support to one of the presidential candidates has just been laid before the Senate.

The Du Ponts of Delaware have threatened to withdraw their support from General Leonard Wood if Senator George Moses, Republican manager, does not keep his hands off the dyestuff bill now pending in the Senate.

It has been charged by opponents of the measure that if passed in its present form it would give the Du Ponts an absolute monopoly over the dye industry which was built up in the United States during the war.

BILL HITS N. E. MILLS.

The bill would impose a prohibitive tariff on all importations of dyes and, it is charged, would place American cotton manufacturers completely at the mercy of the Du Pont Corporation.

Senator Moses is the author of an amendment which strikes at the heart of this monopoly. He introduced it at the solicitation of New England cotton manufacturers who are fearful of the result that would follow enactment of the bill in its present shape.

The Moses amendment would authorize the secretary of the treasury to establish a "fair selling price" for the products of those industries fostered by the bill.

The introduction of the amendment has brought to Senator Moses the threats of the Du Ponts to withdraw their support of General Wood's candidacy if he persists in advocating the amendment.

KENYON HEADS LETTER.

This threat was conveyed to Senator Moses in a letter from an official of the Du Pont corporation. Senator Kenyon of Iowa had the letter read in the Senate. It is as follows:

"Dear Senator Moses:

"I was among the gathering of Republicans at the playhouse in Wilmington on the evening of April 15, and listened with great interest to your address in support of the candidacy of General Leonard Wood.

"Your exposition of your candidate's attitude on national preparedness was particularly interesting, inasmuch as it showed the general to be in thorough accord with all of the principles included in the splendid legislation for the development of a real national defense by the people of the country. Wilmington is deeply interested in this industry, for no community has a closer contact with the vital questions of preparedness or more intimate knowledge of the unpreparedness of the country when the late war broke.

"This amendment which you have offered and your active opposition to the present administration of this act will seem to some of us to be not in accord with your candidate's position or with your former attitude as to the support him because of his stand for national preparedness.

"Personally, I want to support General Wood, but I find it difficult to reconcile the two attitudes of one of his important campaign managers who the one on the floor of the Senate and the other in the open field and I shall be unable to have full faith in his candidacy.

"I am outlining a publicity campaign to inform the public concerning the present status of the prohibition legislation. May I ask you to set me straight as to the apparent contradiction in your attitude on the one hand and your attitude on the other in what I say I write?

"Very truly yours,
(Signed) "CHARLES K. WESTON.

Urges Standard Wage for Physicians

Dr. Alice S. Cutler of No. 3 Linden street, Melrose Highlands, calls upon all physicians to establish a standard wage scheduled.

"I am surprised at the attitude of many manufacturers toward the medical profession," she said. "They say that the cheapest kind of service to be obtained nowadays is that of physicians.

"Is not a doctor worthy of his hire, or is it because they have no business acumen that they can be hired to do important work for almost nothing when factories have to pay other workers good wages to keep them?"

MOVE TO QUASH MINE INDICTMENTS

Indianapolis, Ind., May 8.—A motion to quash the indictment against the miners recently returned by the Federal grand jury here on charges of conspiracy to restrict the production and distribution of coal in violation of the anti-trust act is unconstitutional and that each count is indefinite and "ambiguous and vague," was made in the United States District Court here by Charles S. Hughes, chief of the counsel for the miners and operators. Two separate motions to quash the indictment against the operators were also made by Judge Hughes.

ALIENISTS FACE 'BLUEBEARD'

Confessed Slayer of Five Wives Carefully Observed Throughout Severe Grilling

Los Angeles, May 8.—"Bluebeard" Watson, alias Harvey, underwent a grilling interrogation by District Attorney Woolwine during which it was rumored Watson confessed to the murder of two more women.

The alienists appointed by Judge Willis were present throughout the interview. They sat opposite the "Bluebeard" watching every move.

ALIENISTS TO REPORT.

They will report upon his sanity Monday at 10 o'clock.

Woolwine insisted that Watson tell him the truth as to what he knew of the disappearance of four wives whose fates are still mysteries. Watson has already confessed to killing five wives.

The four missing women are:

Mrs. Gertrude Wilson of Seattle, whom Watson married there in 1917, she disappeared that Summer.

Agnes Wilson of Alberta, whom Watson married under the name of Charles Newton Harvey, also in 1917, and she has been missing since a date soon after the marriage.

Mrs. Emily J. Rose of Los Molinos, Cal., Watson married in Reno in 1918.

Mrs. Lola Harvey. He was living at establishing a bank in Los Molinos. She disappeared last November and the deed to twenty acres of land which she owned was found in Watson's trunk.

The fourth, a woman who lived in Spokane, Wash., and who is known to the authorities only as "Eleanor."

"Bluebeard" Is Not Bay State Harvey

Shelburne Falls, May 8. — Newton Harvey, formerly of this town, is not the California "Bluebeard," Wilbur Andrew Watson, alias Newton Harvey, who is held in that State for the alleged murder of five of his wives, according to evidence received by the local police.

Newton Harvey, the former Shelburne Falls resident, is now living in Thornburg, Canada, according to communications from the Toronto police. Mrs. Julia White of this town, Harvey's sister, received a letter from him from Thornburg, dated April 9.

BANKERS OPPOSE LOAN OF U. S. MONEY TO ROADS

Washington, May 8.—Further government financial aid to the railroads was this afternoon opposed by New York bankers appearing before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee. They declared emphatically that they do not look with favor on the proposal of the railroad executives that the government advance five hundred million dollars for purposes of reconstruction. Neither were they inclined to approve the idea of government certificates to be issued to the railroads backed by government guarantee.

THREE BREAKS IN THREE HOURS AT NORTH ADAMS

North Adams, May 8.—Several large sacks of sugar owned by the Berkshire Cotton Manufacturing Company were stolen by burglars, who made three breaks in three hours here. They got into the company's storehouse of the Berkshire company and entered the storehouse of the Sanderson Bradley Company and the Union Market on Main street.

TRADE WITH SOVIET AND HELP REDEEM RUSSIA, SAYS LORD CECIL

POLICY OF ALLIES IS "INSANE"

Englishman Admits Present General Situation Is Not an "American Invention"

By HERMAN BERNSTEIN.

London, May 8.—That trade relations with Russia should be restored in order that the Russian people shall not be starved, that the economic arrangements in the treaties with Germany and Austria are utterly indefensible, constituting an insane policy demoralizing the will and energy of the German people, that the treaty is the greatest incentive to German bolshevism and may have to be amended, that the economic position of Europe is steadily growing worse, are some of the striking statements made to me in an exclusive interview by Lord Robert Cecil, one of England's leading statesmen, formerly minister of the blockade and representative of the League of Nations.

I met Lord Robert Cecil on the day of my arrival in London. My first question was about the League of Nations, but this he declined to discuss, saying:

FAVORS TRADE WITH RUSSIA.

"I am afraid I cannot speak on this subject as there is danger that in any event I say about it might be misconstrued in America, particularly at this moment."

I then asked Lord Robert Cecil whether there would be a change of policy toward Russia in the near future and whether he was in favor of resuming trade relations with Soviet Russia. He replied:

"I have always been opposed to a policy of military intervention in Russia—after the armistice. Since we are not going to fight the Soviet government of Russia, why not trade with Russia? Even if we disagree with that government, why should we starve the Russian people? Such a policy is both unfair and unwise.

"It seems to me that trade relations with Russia will be resumed before long. In fact, I understand that considerable commercial relations have already been established with Russia through Esthonia, which concluded peace with the Soviet government. England has not yet been trading there, as far as I know, but I am told that other countries, including America, are dealing with Russia right now—that is, they are dealing with Esthonia, which is dealing with Russia.

FAULTS IN PEACE TREATY.

"I can, of course, understand the difficulty and embarrassment on the part of some governments in treating officially with the Soviets, in giving them official recognition just now, but I cannot see why the Russian people should be made to suffer because of this. We have no quarrel with the Russian people.

I asked Lord Cecil for his views concerning the terms of the peace treaty of Versailles. He said:

"The territorial arrangements affecting Germany as stipulated in the treaty are not so bad. The territorial arrangements with Austria are of course much worse. But the economic arrangements with both are utterly indefensible. It is only right to say that the device adopted—the undefined indemnity—was not suggested by the Americans.

"Could not the United States, then exert sufficient influence at the peace conference to prevent this device from being embodied in the treaty?" I asked.

Lord Robert Cecil answered:

"Of course, strong efforts were exerted, but in the end a compromise was made."

NOT PLEASED WITH PEACE.

"Would you say, on the whole, that you were pleased with the outcome of the war?" I asked. To this he replied:

"Of course it was better to win the war than to have been defeated by Germany."

"That goes without saying," I remarked. "What I meant was whether you are pleased with the outcome of the peace as worked out in Paris?"

"I certainly am not," he answered. "The economic arrangement of the German peace treaty are an insane policy. In effect the allies have said to the Germans: 'However hard you work you cannot count on reaping any benefit from your exertions. The more money you make the more will we take from you by way of indemnity.' This has contributed to the demoralization of the will and energy of the German people which all unany observers report. It has helped to render a section of them desperate and hopeless, ready for any adventure which may chance their lot.

"If it has been, I am convinced, one of the greatest incentives to German bolshevism. It has made it difficult, if not impossible, for Germany to obtain outside credits. Who would lend £4 a dollar on a half-billion of assets are already pledged to others?

MILL FIREMEN MAY WALK OUT

Sympathy Strike in Lawrence Likely if Engineers' Demands Are Refused

Lawrence, May 8.—A sympathy strike of firemen in the local mill plants may result, if the demands of the steam engineers, who are now on strike, are not granted today.

The possibility of members of the Amalgamated Textile Workers of America local taking similar action at a mass meeting Sunday serves to make the strike situation here imminently serious.

The strike for shorter hours and more pay has not crippled the mills as yet, but is greatly inconveniencing them. Union officials declare that the number of strikers has increased. Agent H. A. S. Read of the Plymouth Mills denies statements made by the engineers to the effect that his plant has conceded the demands.

The situation is being watched closely by the Amalgamated workers. The radical element are said to regard the present as favorable time to enforce their demands made this week on the mills. James F. Higgins, in speaking for the engineers' local, stated that the strike will be fought to a finish.

The meeting of the Amalgamated will gather the opinion of other branches of the union which the leaders claim is made up of 10,000 laborers, will handle the situation. The Engineers' Union are somewhat divided. It is said, as to whether the offer of aid from the Amalgamated should be accepted.

Fall River Operatives to Ask Conference

Fall River, May 8.—The Fall River Textile Council has voted to ask the manufacturers' association for a conference next Monday night to take up the question of an increase in the wages of local textile operatives.

James Tansey, president of the council, stated after the meeting that the amount to be asked will not be announced until both sides have met. The Textile Council is affiliated with the United Textile Workers but already declared itself in favor of twenty-five-and-half per cent.

NEW BEDFORD MILL FIREMEN FOR SHORT WEEK

New Bedford, May 8.—Firemen employed in the textile mills voted to ask for a six-day week with the same pay they are receiving for seven days' work. They expressed themselves as against leaving work in support of the striking loomfixers. The Building Trades Council voted to support the textile strikers. The loomfixers of Fall River presented the local strikers with $1,000 and offered their moral support.

BRISTOL, R. I., RUBBER WORKERS GO ON STRIKE

Bristol, R. I., May 8.—Nearly 4,000 operatives in the National India Rubber Company plant went on strike when dissatisfaction arose over a new wage scale made effective at the plant. Officials at the plant stated that only 800 of the 4,500 employes remained at work.

FORMER ACTRESS SENT TO JAIL

Original "Florodora" Girl Charges "Frame-Up" as Drug Addict

New York, May 8.—Charging that she was "framed" as a drug addict and sent to Blackwell's Island for ninety days to be treated, Mrs. Maud Humphreys, one of the original "Florodora" girls, filed, through her attorney, affidavits supporting her motion for alimony pending her separation action against her husband, Cecil H. Humphreys, contracting representative of the freight department, Central Railroad of New Jersey.

Mrs. Humphreys, who is the mother of four young children, declares in her affidavits that, despite the fact that she was in a delicate condition at the time, she was "framed" on September 28, 1918, as a drug addict and dragged to Black Jail.

She was hustled from one jail to another, she said, and notwithstanding the fact that a very serious development occurred in one of the jails because of her mental anguish due to humiliation and the separation from her children, she was taken to the Special Sessions Court, convicted and sent to Blackwell's Island.

Mrs. Humphreys admitted that the administration of morphine during a last attack of pneumonia in 1918 left her with the drug habit, but declared that under a physician's treatment the doses had been gradually reduced and she was being cured when arrested.

LOOK FOR SENSATIONS AT NEW HAVEN THEFT TRIAL

Providence, May 8.—Sensations are promised at the trial of Herman Rehmer and Joseph, Fred, Pasquale and Frank Morrelli, brothers, Tuesday, before the Federal court charged with conspiracy in connection with thousands of dollars' worth of merchandise stolen from the New Haven Railroad. One hundred witnesses have been summoned by the government, and it is said upwards of twenty-five witnesses will testify for the defense.

FIND ONE BANDIT WAS DEPORTED

Police Claim Italian, with Share of Braintree Spoils, Was Sent to Europe as Radical

Brockton, May 8.—With three men in custody who have been positively identified as members of the bandit gang which killed and robbed a Braintree paymaster and his aide and attempted to steal the payroll of the U. S. White factory, West Bridgewater, the police are now seeking the man whom they believe to be the brains of the gunmen's schemes. His arrest is hourly expected.

The fifth member of the band, charged with participation in the Braintree killings, was arrested the day following. He was not an American alien and deported to Italy, carrying with him his share of the spoils of the Braintree robbery, the police assert.

The police state this man was caught by Federal agents in one of the many Red raids and was scheduled to appear at a deportation hearing the day of the Braintree holdup. He sent word that he could not attend, and was arrested by the Department of Justice officers and deported the day following. He once worked in the South Braintree factory and lived in West Bridgewater.

Ricardo Calone, 322 Hyde Park avenue, Hyde Park; Nick Sacco of South Abington, and Bert Vannetti of Plymouth were arraigned in the Brockton court again this morning. All have been identified as bandits.

Vensetti and Sacco are technically charged with carrying concealed weapons and Calone is charged with overspeeding his motorcycle.

Calone's house was searched by Brockton police officials, who had hoped to find two of the guns used in the slaying of the paymaster and his assistant.

No guns were discovered but the police learned that Calone was away from home the day of the robbery and did not return until very late at night.

SEA ELEPHANT AND OCTOPUS ON MENU

Roast octopus, curry of penguin, fried sea elephant steak, broiled whale meat and seal will feature the menu to be served at a dinner on May 12 at Shoolbred's Grand Hall, in honor of Sir Ernest Shackleton, the famous British explorer.

The bill of fare is made up of foods obtained by the explorer during the recent Robertson-Cole expedition to the "Bottom of the World," of which he was in command. Governor Coolidge and other officials will attend the dinner to sample the foods which Sir Ernest declares could reduce the high cost of living if generally introduced.

The feast will be followed by an exhibition of moving pictures showing Shackleton's efforts to reach the South Pole and pictures of South Sea Island cannibals in their native habitat.

ELIMINATE 6 IN EKLUND CASE

Photographs of Suspects Are Shown to Witnesses Who Fail to Identify Subjects

Taunton, May 8.—Six suspects have been eliminated as Oliver Eklund's slayers by the police. Among them was a Fall River man whose activities on the night of the murder had been subject to close scrutiny.

Persons who saw the two young men in the Eklund machine were shown photographs of the six men under suspicion. They failed to identify any of them as those who were driving the "death car."

Locating the driver of the motor truck which pulled the Eklund machine from the ditch at Wade's Corner, as Frank Richardson of No. 5 East Beacon street, Providence, has cleared a phase of the case which puzzled Taunton investigators. His story told to Inspectors McElroy and McGuire of Providence corroborated that of the Taunton street car crew who were the first to report seeing the machine on the night of April 22.

Taunton police have received a number of anonymous letters describing the appearance and location of men whom the writers suspect as the Eklund murderers. These have been given to the State police for investigation.

Photographs of the blood-stained interior of the Eklund car have been taken and will be preserved as evidence.

Shoot Canada Whiskey Into U. S. by Torpedo

Detroit, May 8.—Federal prohibition enforcement agents and customs officers had a new one sprung on them when they received the information that electrically propelled torpedoes loaded with whiskey are daily being shot across the St. Clair, from the Canadian side to the American shore.

To add to the mystery the informant refused to divulge his identity and said that the discovery was due entirely to his private investigations.

The torpedoes are of copper construction, with a propeller at the nose operated by electric storage batteries. They submerge about ten feet, and require about five minutes to cross the river at a point designed only as "east of Woodward avenue."

There are three torpedoes now in use, the officials were told, of ten, fifteen and twenty-five-gallon capacity. They were also informed that a huge torpedo of fifty-gallon capacity was in the course of construction.

When the coast is clear, a red flag is placed on the bank of the river, and the sender on the opposite bank aims the torpedo at the spot where the flag is displayed. After being caught and emptied on the American side of the river the torpedoes are ballasted with water and sent back.

END ARGUMENTS AT 'RED' TRIAL

Judge Anderson Will Render His Decision Within Three Weeks

Final arguments in the deportation cases of thirteen alleged "Reds" were ended after a stormy two-day session before Judge Anderson in the Federal Court here, during which communism, pro and con, was discussed, and government officials were attacked and defended.

It was said that in case it was found that any of the petitioners of the habeas corpus proceedings did not have a fair hearing they would be granted a rehearing on the present records to the Department of Labor.

It is expected that Judge Anderson will render his decision within the next two or three weeks.

Assistant United States District Attorney Louis Goldberg, concentrated his efforts on explaining the how and why of the Communist Party.

"When they advocate the Soviet, shop rule and mass action they advocate the overthrow of the government of the United States," he said.

The court asked just what was meant by the word "overthrow." Did it meant revolution the court stated that there has been a number of strikes in the country. He named the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution, the "greatest revolutionary move sincethe abolition of slavery." When woman suffrage is granted it will be another revolution. Seemingly, one can live through many revolutions and still be in the United States."

Furthermore, Judge Anderson declared, "I shall find, unless they changes my mind, that the Communist party advocates the national ownership of the mines and industries. That's what the Communist party means. Does that mean the overthrow of the government, according to the statute of 1918?"

WOUNDED SOLDIERS TO SEE "THE JOLLIES"

Wounded soldiers at Parker Hill hospital have been invited to attend "The Jollies" to be produced by members of the Superintendent's Club in Boston Opera House, May 20, 21 and 22. An opera in two acts will constitute the main part of the show. There will be several specialties, including a skit called "Outta Board" in which four young men are to be the principals.

The "pony" ballet appearing in this year's production is said to be one of the best that ever appeared in an amateur production in this city.

R. L. Harlow, director of the show, says he will surpass all previous efforts of the association. Governor Coolidge, Mayor Peters and other high and mighty officials are been invited and are expected to attend.

SHOES BOUGHT 4 YEARS AGO NET A BIG PROFIT

North Adams, May 8.—One local merchant received quite a surprise this week when a pair of shoes that he bought four years ago for $2.35 and recently sold were returned by the purchaser, who claims they were not wearing well. The merchant sent them back to the shoe factory and this week received a credit memorandum of $7 for the shoes.

REVERE POLICE OFFICER 'FIRED'

Lieutenant Chainey, Leader in Wage Fight, Dropped for "Insubordination"

By order of Mayor Walsworth, Lieutenant Clair P. Chainey of the Revere police force, one of the leaders in the move for $5 a day for patrolmen, has been discharged from the department.

The notice of discharge, read at roll call, declares that he is dropped "for the good of the service, for insubordination and for conduct detrimental to the interest of the Police Department."

Lieutenant Chainey, who is chairman of the Wage Board fighting for the increase, says he will ask for a hearing as provided under the police regulations. At the hearing he will demand that the charges against him be made specific instead of general as contained in the formal discharge notice.

Chainey admits signing a petition to the City Council requesting a wage increase for patrolmen.

OWEN MOORE SUED FOR $4,500 BY LANDLORDS

Los Angeles, May 8.—Owen Moore, former husband of Mary Pickford, has been made defendant in a suit for $4,500 damages.

The complainants are Matilda and Richard Kipling, who leased a house to Moore in February for a period of three months. The damage complained of is alleged to have been done to the furniture, rugs, curtains and wall of the bungalow. Beautiful and costly rugs are alleged to have been soaked with wine and whiskey.

R. I. Women Delegates Demand Expenses

Providence, May 8.—The question of paying the expenses of the three women delegates to the National Democratic Convention has raised a row in party circles here, according to women leaders who say Rhode Island will be minus delegates at the convention if their expenses are not defrayed by the "organization."

It is said that the party would defray the expenses of the three women delegates if someone would solve the financial problem. Mrs. Della A. Johnson, chairman of Democratic State Central Committee; Mrs. Robert E. Newton, National Committeeman and Mrs. Fred S. Penner, director of political education, are the delegates.

RED SOX OUT TO CLEAN UP MACKMEN IN REST OF SERIES

RUSSELL IS HIT HARD BY A'S

Visitors' Lack of Teamwork Helped Red Sox to Make Contest Look Close

By NICK FLATLEY.

Some real, regular pitching loomed along the skyline of the Fenway to celebrate the closing of this initial week of the longest home stand of the hurrying Red Sox. Their presence here this time has been rewarded by a couple of victories and fairly large crowds, sufficiently numerous to indicate that this season will proceed to shatter attendance records, once the combination of good baseball and warm weather gets working.

Crowds this year, for some reason or other, are inclined to be enthusiastic and full of pep and noise and hope and things like that. Even on the frigid days, the cheering has been super-normal, and augurs plenty of vociferation, when the sun gets on schedule. There is sure to be much jubilation if our arriving teams can hang on near the pace.

Probably the fans who go to the games and howl are happy because they are getting the same old article of baseball, at only a slightly increased cost, and the same old peanuts and pop and frankfurters and things. Anyhow, there's the cheering, even when the case looks hopeless, and to date our teams have been justifying the support.

Perry vs. Pennock on Peak Today

Reverting to the pitching part of it, Scott Perry was due to fling for the Mackerels, while Herbie Pennock was chafing to take a shot at his former team mates. Herbie was due to open the series, anyhow, but the plan was wrecked when the slender southpaw was hurled into the first tilt. He only worked a few innings, though, and was in good fettle to repeat.

A's Poor Teamwork Made Game Close

There is a chance any day now that Harry Harper will start a game. Southpaw Harry believes he'd put his wildness on file if he had plenty of mound exercise, and Manager Barrow is inclined to think along similar lines. If Harry really could carve a place for himself on the staff, the Sox would be very well fixed as far as pitching is concerned. As things are, few teams can compare with them in box strength.

The invaders from Philadelphia, though they are inclined to flutter in the big games, showed a lot of good baseball—furnished so much in the third game of the series that they won 3 to 4, chasing Russell of the peak. Those A's jumped out at the start and gave the Sox a stern chase. The Sox chased right down to the ninth chapter, but just missed coming through.

Lack of team work on part of the enemy, more than Boston bats hits made the game as close as it was. Young Dykes at third, and youthful Galloway at short, show flashes of brilliancy. But they do not co-ordinate, as they say. They haven't got used to each other yet, though they probably will, as it would appear that C. Mack has decided to try no more juggling of his infield.

Naylor turned the tentacle to glory, tossing a very fine game of ball. He wasn't a bit discouraged by the happenings behind him, and deserved the laurels, or whatever it is the winning

Mack pitchers get crowned with. His mates came to his relief with a lot of solid swatting, letting Russell very hard, and whacking Karr, who succeeded him, on several occasions.

But that game is history now, and the Sox were more than eager to get the remaining two free of the series. Cleveland leads the Western charge here, starting Tuesday, and then the local outfit will be put to the real test. And naturally they're anxious for all the ammunition possible, in the way of victories tucked away.

BUSINESS MANAGER OF YANKEES IS DEAD

New York, May 8.—Harry L. Sparrow, business manager of the New York Yankees and one of the most popular men in baseball, is dead of heart failure at his home. Sparrow's health had been failing for several years, but he kept at his work and retained that cheerfulness of disposition that endeared him to every one connected with professional sports.

POWELL, BRAVES' BIG NOISE

Ray Plays Sensational Game in the Field and Drives Out Timely Home Run

Philadelphia, May 8.—Sensational fielding and hitting by Ray Powell brought home the bacon for the Boston Braves in the clash with the Phillies, 3 to 6. Ray not only prevented the Quakers from poking across the winning tally by a sensational running one-hand stab of Casey Stengel's long clout in the sixth but in the following frame banged a homer over the right field wall.

Both Stallings and Cravath gambled upon the game, as both experimented with third string twirlers in order to size them for the season. John Paul Jones took the slab for the Braves at the outset and in the early sessions managed to keep the Phils' cracker well scattered. However, in the seventh, he got into distress and Hughie McQuillan was rushed in and wound up with a one-hit bit of glory. His main feat was striking out Cravath in the ninth with men on the bases ending the game.

Charley Pick's fielding improved considerably and the veteran Brave outfit put up an exhibition of errorless ball. Pick has been having considerable dental work done while in the Quaker City and the strain has injured his playing somewhat.

Wilson Will Give O'Dowd New Bout

By JACK CONWAY.

Johnny Wilson, new world's middleweight champion, intends to give Mike O'Dowd an opportunity to win back the title he lost at the Fenway A. A.'s show at Mechanics Building.

"O'Dowd gave Wilson a chance at his title," declared Marty Killilea, manager of the Charlestown champion. "Now he has an opportunity to win holder he intends to be a real champion. After a two-weeks' vacation, he will be ready to meet all comers. He will clash with anybody in the middleweight class whom the public believes is capable of giving him a battle.

"There are many fans who think O'Dowd stands the best chance of any boxer of beating Wilson. Mike owns Johnny the big chance of his life and now that we are on top we are not going to forget the Paul man. He will be given another match with Wilson.

"I believe that if Wilson meets O'Dowd again, he will win even more easily than he did the other night. Johnny will have the confidence which comes with championship and will try for a knockout.

"Wilson will be at the ringside at the Armory Club show on Thursday night to challenge Georges Carpentier. He feels sure he would be able to conquer the famous Frenchman."

Mullens Believes O'Dowd Won Right to a Draw

Paddy Mullens, O'Dowd's manager, believes his middleweight champion did right to at least a draw.

"If it hadn't been for Mike there wouldn't have been a fight," said Mullins. "O'Dowd forced the issue in every round. He crowd dp Wilson's knockdown when he sent the latter to the canvas late in the fourth. Many of the fans thought the boys wrestled to the mat when as a matter of fact it was a right-hand punch to the stomach which knocked Wilson down. He then pulled Mike down on top of him.

"I don't believe in offering alibis. Decision I believe, looked right. That fair-minded fans will agree with me when I say O'Dowd showed enough stuff against Wilson to get a draw.

"I dispute Wilson's claim to the championship as he didn't make 158 pounds which was the weight agreed on for the match. Johnny would make this notch and I allowed him to enter the ring at 160 pounds.

"The defeat was a hard blow to Mike as he thought he won. I am talking all the same for O'Dowd didn't know McInnis well. I told him Hester was my friend and that was enough for him.

"If Wilson is the kind of fighter I believe him to be, he will give O'Dowd a chance to win back his title. We didn't avoid Wilson when we were in a position to discuss terms and I hope that Marty Killilea and the Charlestown middleweight will follow our example.

"O'Dowd returned to New York Friday, but will be ready to fight Wilson again in a week's time."

Notables to See Great French Ring Champion

When Georges Carpentier, the wonderful French heavyweight, enters the ring at the Armory A. A.'s show at Mechanics Building next Tuesday night, Governor Coolidge, Mayor Peters, General Edwards, Rear Admiral Dunn, Senator Lodge and the French consul will be in attendance.

Invitations were extended to these officials and they promptly accepted them. They are as eager as thousands of other persons in New England to behold the great French war hero and boxer.

No European boxer ever received as great receptions in this country as those which have been accorded to Carpentier. Since his arrival in New York he has been greeted like a real hero wherever he has gone. At Pittsburgh the other night 15,000 persons were on hand for his boxing exhibition. At Baltimore he was greeted by a military band and escorted through a lane of thousands of people to the armory, where he boxed.

4 U. S. WOMEN IN BRITISH GOLF

American Contestants Are All Drawn in Upper Bracket for Newcastle Tourney

By ROBERT E. HARLOW.

The first of the lively international competitions in 1920 golf will begin Tuesday at Newcastle, County Down, Ireland, when four American women, two from Canada and 51 from the British Isles will contest for the British woman's championship. The field lacks Miss Alexa Stirling, the American champion, but the four who will represent the United States are all capable players.

The American delegation is composed of Mrs. C. H. Vanderpoel, a former national title holder; Miss Marion Hollins, present Metropolitan champion, and a former runner-up for the national title; Miss Mildred Caverly, who was runner-up to Miss Stirling at Belmont in 1914, and Miss Rosamond Sherwood, a strong player from the Metropolitan district.

Americans Drawn in Upper Bracket

All of the American women have been drawn in the upper bracket of the tournament, with Miss Cecil Leitch, the British woman's champion, in the lower half. If any one of the American players is fortunate enough to reach the final round, she will undoubtedly have to play Miss Leitch, as it is doubtful if the champion will be stopped by any of her countrywomen in the lower half.

Miss Leitch is shooting in her best form, she scored a 72 in an open competition recently. This is extremely low scoring for a women's event, but a number of other women broke 80 on the same course, which had a number of short holes, which enabled the hardest hitters to get home in two, or with a drive and pitch.

The Americans have practiced over the Newcastle course but no medal play round has been put on the cards. They are reported to be in good form.

Whitcomb and Brennan Hard Pair to Beat

William A. Whitcomb and Stanley C. Brennan of the Worcester Country Club are a difficult pair to beat. They have been cleaning up all the Worcester tournaments in the last few matches and recently let down Fred Wright, of Brookline, who was paired with Loring Coes of Worcester. The match was played at the Worcester golf club. Whitcomb eased his way around in 77 and Wright, playing the course for the second time, proved by his 81 that he is to take another shot at the Whitcomb-Brennan combination next week.

The same Fred was walloping the ball further than he has in many years. He was also sinking some exceedingly long puts and for three two reaching the green in 2, 3 and 2 shots. Woodland these days. The course is changed somewhat because a number of holes are too damp for use, but 70 over any combination of holes is pretty fair golf, considering a note of. It has only been bettered by Francis Ouimet, who was up-and-down to the end in 68, which was 37 and 33, with a two at the last hole, and Chick Evans, each time this hole was played.

Hagen's Round at Deal of Good Omen

Walter Hagen shot a 74 at Deal, New Jersey. If he can hold to this figure in Deal, England, in the British open championship, the defenders will have to keep their heads down.

• • •

Dr. John A. Stockwell of Woodland has shuffled by his Winter golf at Pinehurst. He is knocking off the temporary Woodland lay-out in the low eighties regularly.

FARMER SULLIVAN HOLDS BILLY CARNEY TO A DRAW

Farmer Sullivan of New York held Billy Carney of New Bedford to a no-round draw in the final bout at the Commonwealth A. C.

Cleveland Johnny Downes knocked out Charley Sheppard of New York in the third round. Hammering Howie of Woonsocket defeated young Gould of Brockton in a warm ten-round bout. Kelly and Phil Boyle defeated Willie Moore of Lawrence in one round.

Yale Airmen Finish First

New York, May 8.—The first intercollegiate aerial field day was held at the government flying field at Hicksville, L. I., Yale won. Williams was second and Princeton and Columbia tied for third.

There were four events. One was a twenty-five mile long distance race. Another was a short compass action in which the pilot and his mechanic rose from coin, dressed and took off; another was to take off and landing to mark, and the fourth included manoeuvering and acrobatics. Although scores of machines flew, there were but two accidents, neither serious. The summary:

Long Distance Race—Harry Thorpe, Yale, first; Lawton of Yale, second; Lieut. Cornell, third; W. B. Pentland, Cornell, fourth.

Short Distance—Robert A. Perry, Williams, first; D. H. Macgregor, Princeton, second; Homer Sewell, Yale, third; Samuel H. Paul, Pennsylvania, fourth.

Time—1:12 4-5.

Landing Contest—Norton H. Press, Princeton, first; Perry Williams, Pittsburgh, second; Lieut. Percy Pyle, Williams, third.

Acrobatics—B. M. Kirkland, Columbia, first; Homer Sewell, Yale, second; Samuel H. Paul, Pennsylvania, third.

The score follows: Yale, 9; Williams, 6; Princeton and Columbia, 3.

CALLS HOOVER INCONSISTENT

Senator Johnson Points to His Change of Heart on League Reservations

Washington, May 8.—Senator Johnson issued the following statement today in answer to Herbert Hoover's challenge that he define his position on the League of Nations:

"The League presented to the Senate by the President, which Mr. Hoover advocated last year, neither promotes peace nor reduces armaments.

A CHANGE OF HEART.

"During Mr. Hoover's advocacy of this League last year he never mentioned reservations; on the contrary, the tenor of his speeches was in direct opposition to any reservations. With his candidacy came his change of heart and for the first time we find him when a candidate, never before, favoring reservations.

"These reservations last year, it was asserted, 'broke the heart of the world,' 'cut the heart out of the covenant,' made us 'scuttle and run' and the 'slackers of the world.'

"Mr. Hoover, from apparent opposition to the reservations, now embraces the opportunity to 'break the heart of the world' and 'cut the heart out of the covenant.'

HOOVER INCONSISTENT.

"I have consistently opposed the pact as presented and with the reservations attached. I would welcome, of course, any real attempt to promote peace and prevent war. Mr. Hoover last year had one view, this year he has another. As time progresses and as various nominations present themselves, we may look for other views as well."

London Press See Sure Defeat for Hoover

By Universal Service.

London, May 8.—The consensus of leading English newspapers appears to be that Herbert Hoover's overwhelming defeat in the California primaries has snuffed out all chances for him to be nominated. The Manchester Guardian's correspondent at New York cables:

"On the basis of all ordinary calculations the California vote finally eliminated Mr. Hoover as a political possibility.

"The Hoover fiasco is the result of bad advice and bad political judgment. He threw away certain nomination and almost certain election to the presidency by his premature partisanship."

By this the correspondent means that Hoover made a fatal tactical mistake by turning his back on the Democratic party and flatly announcing he would run only upon the straight Republican ticket.

The American correspondent of the Daily News sums up his dispatch by declaring Mr. Hoover's chances for the presidency are much impaired.

N. Y. Democrats Favor World Disarmament

By Universal Service.

Albany, N. Y., May 8.—World disarmament is the substitute proposed by the State Democratic organization for the League of Nations. Dominated by Tammany Hall, the delegates and alternates to the national convention, refused to indorse President Wilson's administration and ignored the peace treaty, the League of Nations and the prohibition question. Governor Smith was elected chairman of the delegation.

The delegation will go West pledged as a unit to fight to have certain planks inserted in the platform. They are:

First—A demand for the disarmament of the world.

Second—The program embodied in Governor Smith's welfare legislation, including the eight-hour day, a living wage for women and children, a prohibition against women and children working at night and a constitutional amendment prohibiting child labor.

CANDIDATES ASKED ATTITUDE ON RUSSIA

New York, May 8.—The National Civic Federation, of which Judge Alton B. Parker, Democratic candidate for President in 1904, is president addressed a questionnaire to Presidential candidates requesting a statement of their position on the question or recognizing Soviet Russia.

Copies were sent to Republican candidates Wood, Poindexter, Lowden, Coolidge, Harding, Butler, Johnson and Knox, and to Democratic candidates Bryan, Palmer, McAdoo, Edwards and Cox.

"We believe," said a declaration which accompanied it, "that recognition of Soviet Russia would be a repudiation of all that our national life has represented for 140 years. The declaration asserted that Bolshevism aims to destroy the bulwarks of morality and social order and that all its aims are destructive."

EDWARDS PLANS TO BE "BUSINESS" CANDIDATE

New York, May 8.—Governor Edward I. Edwards of New Jersey will make his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination not as a "wet" candidate, but as a business man and an advocate of personal liberty, it was asserted by Walter W. Vick, manager of the Edwards' headquarters.

COURT RULES CALAIS MAYORALTY IS A TIE

Calais, Me., May 8.—Neither party received a majority of votes necessary for the election to office of Mayor of Calais, according to the decision rendered by Justice Scott Wilson, in the Calais municipal election recount hearing. As a result of the decision a special election will probably be held within two weeks.

ROBERT MANTELL AND GENEVIEVE HAMPER IN "CAESAR"

STAGE and SCREEN

by F. J. McISAAC

"MARY" COMES TO BOSTON TOWN

If I am not mistaken George M. Cohan has always thought pretty well of the name of Mary, and has already in song objected to its French variation of Marie. Now we have a musical comedy called "Mary," in which one of his subsidiary authors has dramatized his admiration for the name. I say "subsidiary" authors, because George M. Cohan gets his signature upon everything he produces, no matter who wrote or played in the first place.

During the past week every girl named Mary who could be found in the directory by the energetic Mr. Vien, who represents the Cohan entertainment, has received a series of postal cards enlarging upon the beauty of the name. I am told that he found two thousand girls named Mary, not counting the Mary Anns, Mary Ellens and Mary Anastasias who were legion.

The piece is quite new and comes here after a very successful experience in Philadelphia, succeeding "Seabrairie" at the Tremont.

"Lend Me Your Ears."

Robert Mantell is reviving "Julius Caesar" at the Hollis next week. This brilliant play by William Shakespeare has been rarely performed, our American actors preferring Hamlet, Shylock and Romeo to the three Romans, Caesar, Brutus and Marc Antony.

Yet every schoolboy knows the oration beginning "Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears," and the tent scene with its ghost is as impressive as anything Shakespeare ever wrote. The absence of any female role of importance has banished from the company of late years to have woman stars. Mantell takes care of Genevieve Hamper in the production by casting her in a boy's part.

This trouble with Shakespeare as given in America is the refusal of our actors to produce anything but the overworked half dozen out of the thirty odd plays of importance written by Shakespeare. If we could get the same sense of novelty out of a performance by the Bard of Avon that we could get at any modern drama we were witnessing for the first time we would attend more frequently. It's a curious type of mind which goes to a play for the sake of comparing the actors with other actors heard many times in the same roles. It is certainly not the public's frame of mind.

Let's have some Shakespearean novelties. Why doesn't Mr. A. H. Woods produce "Measure for Measure"? It's in his line.

Not a Long Chance, Either.

"If Frank Bacon could wait thirty years for a chance I can wait a few months."

That's how Lella Bennett, who plays Mandy in "Howdy, Folks" landed a job with John Golden, the producer. "Lightnin'," Frank Bacon's vehicle, the hit of New York and Golden had accepted "Howdy, Folks" and hoped it would parallel the success of his other attraction. Winchell Smith, the author, had been compelled to witness an obscure entertainment in Jersey City one night and spied Lella Bennett in the cast. He reported her to Golden as exactly the sort of girls they wanted for Mandy.

"Howdy, Folks" was a long way from production, however, and it was necessary to wait many months. Golden saw Miss Bennett, liked her and asked her if she would take a voiceless part in the court scene in "Lightnin'" until he was ready for her. Then all was set for a season which begins this paragraph and this explains her success in "Howdy, Folks."

How the Town Has Moved.

It takes an outsider to visit our city and make discoveries. Leo Shubert, who was here last week to witness the premiere of Sinclair Lewis' had been informed that the Arlington Theatre was away out of the theatre district. He declared that in his opinion it had an excellent location, though a good deal off, and would undoubtedly make a valuable addition to the Shubert string.

In the old days of the Castle Square, now the Arlington, when J. K. Murray, the baritone, who is now playing in "Lightnin'" in Chicago, headed a grand opera troupe there, the Castle Square was a long ways from anywhere. Aside from the Hollis Street Theatre, there was no theatre further south than Boylston street, and the really popular house was down near Scollay square, the Boston Museum.

Now we find the Majestic, Wilbur, Shubert, Plymouth and Hollis all south of Boylston street, and the Shubert nearly half way to the Arlington Theatre. In the nature of things, another theatre or two will be built in the vicinity of Broadway, formerly Pleasant street, and then the attraction will be centrally located, as it were.

A Couple of Talmists.

When the Gosmon twins, Rena and Helena, were studying music in Pittsburgh they earned their living as manicurists in the William Penn Hotel. They divided the job, alternating daily at school and in the barber shop. As they look exactly alike they got away with it very nicely, and the regular customers never knew to which sister they were unburdening their souls as they had their claws clipped.

Now that they are fascinating the front rows in "Fifty-Fifty" and people are interested in their views on things in general, the girls draw upon their manicure period and read character from the shape of men's hands.

"Anybody can tell the hand of a bricklayer from a clerk," said Miss Helena, "but we got so we could tell a bookkeeper from an executive. There are no two pair of hands alike. For example, the index finger of the expert salesman is nearly as long as his second finger, while the little finger of the gambler is very long." Upon being asked for some done upon the hands of Herb Corthell, the girls refused to be interviewed.

Georgia, a Good Servant.

I drifted behind at "Oui, Madame" the other day just as they were treating Georgia. Georgia, you lady should be treated and not take the matter into court.

After a couple of brutal actors had hurled little Georgia around like a sack of meal and finally mopped up the stage with her, I went over her direction by greeting her in a boy's part.

After a couple of brutal actors had hurled little Georgia around like a sack of meal and finally mopped up the stage with her, I went over her direction by greeting her in a boy's part.

"Any what?"

"Bones."

"Oh, that," said Georgia. "It hurts them more than it does me as the mother said when she spanked her children. The thing that makes me is I can't wear any good clothes any more."

"Why not? You look all right dressed up."

"I'll say I do. But the public want me to play servant girls. I've tried other things but they don't want it. It looks as though I were a servant for the rest of my life."

"Well, good servants are scarce."

"I don't play good servants, I play bad ones," replied Miss O'Ramey as she dashed out on the boards again, this time with a tray of demi-tasses.

"You can fool the upper classes With your varied characters, But beware will protect the working girl."

Frances Throws a Kiss.

It's very hard to make many theatre goers believe that an actress who is bold and bad on the stage, sheds her character with her long tumes and goes home to her mother or perhaps a sick child.

Frances Underwood, who plays the brazen widow in "Civilian Clothes," was standing in the wings a few evenings ago and saw some friends in a box on the opposite side. They spied her at the same moment, and Frances threw a kiss at them.

Sitting alone in the other box was a man who also saw Frances and who intercepted the kiss. He assumed it was meant for himself and assumed a killing attitudes for the rest of the evening. Every time Miss Underwood appeared in the wings she met a smirk. The lady, who is quite timid off the stage, became afraid of the man and finally went and hired a stage hand to go home with her. But Romeo was not there.

Next week Frances found a note, however, in which the recipient of the kiss apologized for his card and suggested an interview, which he didn't get.

A Cunning Little Thing.

"The Charm School" was announced as a comedy with music but there is only one musical number in the piece. It is better described as a farce with music. The musical number is what was taken is dramatized very skillfully on the whole, though the dramatization has provided four minor characters as friends of the hero and all are introduced into the Ladies' Seminary when the hero takes it over as instructors. Only one of these characters existed in the book, to remember correctly.

I found it a genuinely original little farce and got a lot of real enjoyment out of it.

Reid a Jass King.

When Wallace Reid, the screen star, was yet a little lad, as the poets say, his parents decided that he had in him the soul of a musical genius. So they turned him over to a teacher of the pianoforte and had the professor do his worst with the boy. After three lessons it was discovered that young Wallace was practicing ten minutes shorter by the clock ahead fifty, then reporting to his mother that his daily attack on the heroes was o'er and departing for the baseball field. One day Father Reid stayed home from toil. He discovered Wallie's subterfuge and the music lessons were abruptly terminated.

Today Wallace Reid can't play music the way it is written. But, oh, boy! he can certainly jass it off by ear, as anybody in the Lasky studio who has heard him operating on his saxophone can tell you. Wallie Reid is the champion saxophonist of the West Coast. He has a jass band all his own, which has played at several affairs in Los Angeles and vicinity. The band appears in the newest Reid comedy, "The Dancing Fool," which will be on view at the Modern and Beacon Theatres beginning Monday.

Mary Miles Minter Smiles.

During the screening of "Jenny, Be Good," Mary Miles Minter's latest photoplay release, which will be shown the last half of the week at the Orpheum Theatre, a spinning wheel and doom played an important part, and between scenes the star fussed with it until she became quite accomplished.

In grandmother's days weaving was a home industry; a spinning wheel and a loom were household fixtures, and no girl had received her full education until she could use these appliances with the utmost ease.

"Jenny, Be Good" dates back to the days of spinning wheels and they were brought forth from the attics of the older residents of the town where the film was being taken and used for "atmosphere." But the fairly little star saw something more than "atmosphere" in the contrivance which made the clothes of great grandparents. She saw a thing which she had never explored and handed immediate attention.

Her exploration into the intricacies of a spinning wheel brought so much interest and enjoyment that she offered to purchase the wheel for a good round sum of money. But—no, it was a family heirloom and could not be sold. After many smiles and a great deal of coaxing she was allowed to have it moved to her own home to keep until the novelty of it had worn off.

KEITH'S THEATRE

To Keith's Theatre next week comes Anatol Friedland with "Music Land," a fine mixture of mirth, melody and song—a genuine fantasy—gorgeously staged and costumed. With Anatol Friedland in the cast are Lucille Fields, prima donna; Emilie Fitzgerald, specialty dancer; Hazel Hall, soubrette; Vera Valmar, violinist, and a chorus of beauties.

Next comes George MacFarlane, the favorite baritone and one of the very best vocalists ever heard on the vaudeville stage. Harry Hiens will be seen and heard in some choice songs and rollicking stories. Joe Morris and Nellie Campbell will present their novelty comedy "Ain't-a-Shame."

HOLLIS ST. THEATRE

A spectacular new scenic production of "Julius Caesar," modelled after a famous staging of the most popular, will present day audiences, of all Shakespeare's plays at the Theatre Antoine, Paris, is promised as the feature of the second final week of Robert B. Mantell's engagement at the Hollis Street Theatre, starting Monday night.

The scenes are described as massive in their effects of Roman architectures in the days of the first Caesar, and gorgeous in coloring to the highest point of classic taste. A night scene in the gardens of Brutus, with the Roman Capitol in the distance; the interior of the capitol, and the ferrite scene have been particularly commended since the Mantell productions was launched in Chicago a few months ago. A notable feature of the Paris production, copied, with slight modifications, in the Mantell production, is a new arrangement of the mob in the forum scene, designed to focus the attention more particularly on Brutus and Antony, heightening the effect of the most dramatic climax of the play.

"FOLLIES" COMING

At the Colonial Theatre on Monday evening, May 17th, Florenz Ziegfeld, Jr., will offer the thirteenth edition of the now famous Ziegfeld Follies." The engagement will positively be a limited one, with bargain matinees both on Wednesday and Saturday. The incoming issue of this popular entertainment is said to be the best of the entire series. It will be presented in two acts and twenty odd Joseph Urban scenes. As has been his custom for the past twelve years, Mr. Ziegfeld is bringing to Boston the original New York cast and beauty chorus numbering more than 150 players. Among the numerous artists that will appear in the cast of the massive revue are such popular local favorites as Marilynn Miller, Eddie Cantor, Bert Williams, John Steel, Delyle Alda, Van and Schenck, Johnny Dooley, Ray Dooley, George LeMaire, Eddie Dowling and Phil Dwyer.

TREMONT THEATRE

Monday night will undoubtedly mark the beginning of a brilliant chapter in this season's theatrical history, when the Tremont Theatre will welcome the Boston premiere of George M. Cohan's Comedians in the brand new musical play, "Mary," the book and lyrics of which are by Otto Harbach and Frank Mandel and the music by Louis Hirsch.

Among the clever song numbers with which the production is studded are: "Down on That Old Kansas Farm," "Anything You Want," "The Love Nest," "Any Time I Meet a Lady," "When a Woman Feels Like Smiling," "It's a Wise Baby" and many others.

Among those included in the expert cast protraying the cleverly drawn characters are Peggy Wood of their appearance, Jack McGowan, Georgia Caine, Alfred Gerrard, Florrie Millership, Janet Velie, Charles Judels, Frederic Graham, James Marlow, Sybilla Sheridan. The large chorus has been chosen with unusual care.

MADAME AGUGLIA

Mimi Aguglia, the brilliant Sicilian actress, will appear at the Tremont Theatre tomorrow evening, presenting for the first time in the city a bright and snappy little Italian comedy, entitled "Za Santarella." Madame Aguglia's appearance will be given under the auspices of the Sem Benelli Dramatic Association and several of its members will support this captivating artist in the presentation of the delightfully refreshing Italian playlet. Madame Aguglia is landing her services in an effort to stimulate the drive which is being conducted by prominent Italians in this city and State in an effort to raise $100,000 for the establishment of a permanent home for Italian children.

MALDEN AUDITORIUM

"A Voice in the Dark," which will be presented by the Temple Stock Company at the Malden Auditorium the coming week, is one of the greatest mystery dramas ever produced on the American stage. The play is the combined effort of Ralph D. Dyar and Willard Mack, the latter having created the role of the lawyer-lover during its sensational run earlier this season.

SOMERVILLE THEATRE

All the world loves to be mystified and kept in suspense and this opportunity will be afforded patrons of the Somerville beginning Monday matinee and twice daily for the remainder of the week, with the exception of the one performance on Monday evening, when the Vivian Crosby Futurist Revue will be staged. (All other performances of the week will be given as usual) "The Silent Witness" contains thrills enough for the most ardent mystery lover and it has a theme of love and romance with much tender pathos.

GAYETY THEATRE

For the sophisticated, blase theatre goer who says that there is nothing new under the sun a visit to the Gayety Theatre next week is advised. For Arthur Pearson's "Rip Lively Girls" plays an engagement there and from all reports it is a new idea along original lines. Mr. Pearson has gained quite an enviable reputation in the past few seasons as a producer of burlesque shows that are out of the ordinary run for this class of entertainment.

A clever cast of principals is headed by "Shorty" McAllister, who is one of the best fun-makers on the stage today. His accompanying feature in the murder of gloom is Harry Shannon and with this pair of comedians it is a safe bet that they could make an Esquimau laugh.

ACTORS' FUND BENEFIT

On Friday afternoon, May 21, the Actors' Fund benefit performance will be given at the Colonial Theatre under the auspices of the Association of Theatre Managers of Boston. As in past years, attractions from every theatre of Boston will be represented. The magnitude of the bills at these performances creates intense interest in the public as the one great event of its kind in the year. Mr. Daniel Frohman, president of the society, has been active in preparing this year's affair and promises some new features that will make the bill especially attractive. The full programme will be published lated. In the meantime advance applications will be received the Colonial Theatre.

GENIUS AND THE CROWD

The three-act comedy with an inspirational motive as its theme entitled "Genius and the Crowd," with George Renavant as the star, will be presented for a limited engagement at the Hollis Theatre on Monday evening, May 17 by Geo. M. Cohan. The piece is the work of John T. McIntyre and Francis Hill, and has been staged by Sam Forrest under the personal direction of the famous George M. Cohan himself. Among the prominent members of the cast are Marion Coakley, Frank Otto, Fuller Mellish, Katherine Stewart, Wright Kramer, Viola Leach, H. Cooper Cliffe, Ralph Souls, Marie Louise Lefleur, Howard Moulden, Gladys Wilson and Charles Bartlett.

POPS

Following upon the heels of a successful opening week, the second week of Pop Concerts in Symphony Hall will offer three special nights, and six programs which prove Maestro Jacchia's ability to jam each evening with brilliance and melody. Of course the conductor's infectious verve and the "talent" under him, eighty strong, are the prime factors in the high flow of spirits. There will be three special nights in the second week. On Monday, May 10, the Boston Chamber of Commerce, Robert S. Rose, chairman, will have a "get-together." On Wednesday, May 12, Amherst College Night will bring songs and other additional celebrations. William B. Murrill will be song leader. This night will be given under the auspices of the Amherst Alumni Association, Donald P. McKay, president. Carl Lamson, the famous accompanist of Kreisler, a graduate of '09, will be the organist. On Friday, May 14, there will be an All-Russian-Tschaikowsky program.

PARK SQUARE BENEFIT

The Monday evening performance of "Civilian Clothes" at Selwyns' Park Square Theatre will be tendered as a testimonial to the popular box office staff, James E. Doyle, treasurer, and Howard Halpin, assistant treasurer, through the courtesy of Oliver Morosco and the Selwyns.

LEGION MEMORIAL CONCERT

Widespread interest is being shown in the great memorial concert to be given by world famous opera stars, an orchestra of 110 pieces and a chorus of 750 voices, in Mechanics Hall, Sunday afternoon, May 16, under the auspices of the American Legion. Not only is this imposing aggregation of musical talent one of the most wonderful ever gathered together in Boston, but this concert is the first of its kind to be held here in memory of the war heroes who fell on the field of battle in Europe, and now lie "in Flanders field."

S. Kronberg is in personal charge of the concert. George S. Dunham will conduct. Owing to the exceptionally large number of participants and four thousand seats only available to the public.

Miss Marie Rappold, prima donna soprano; Mme. Margaret Matzenauer, mezzo soprano; Giovanni Martinelli, tenor, and Leon Rothier, basso, world famous soloists from the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, whose talents are well known to every lover of music, will sing.

MOLLIE WILLIAMS' SHOW

Specialties and features will be a large part of the offering by Mollie Williams' Greatest Show, at the Casino all next week. Miss Williams herself, supported by Frank Fanning and Murray Bernard, will contribute a sensational dramatic specialty, presenting a tragic episode of the North, and entitled "The Unknown Law." This is an even greater sensation than was "La Dance Enticeuse," a former vaudeville success from these same artists, which created a great deal of talk throughout burlesque.

OUIJA BOARD TEA

A ouija-board reception will be held by the twenty-six ladies of the "Fifty-Fifty" company immediately following the Wednesday matinee.

The "Fifty-Fifty" Ouija Club, which is composed of Ann Lemeau, Elsie Young, Lella Hatchett, Richmond in "Cabaret De Luxe" will appear in a number of fast and dancing production with Marie Parker, Maurice La Varre and Jack Powell. The rest of the cast of eight people will offer something new in the musical line. Dorothy Ward will offer a fantastic acrobatic and pianologue. Eddie Heron & Co. will appear in one of their original comedy, "The Traveling Man," which is said to contain an abundance of humor.

PARAGON PARK

The big dance hall at Paragon Park, which is open every Saturday night, is the scene of many a merry terpsichorean art these days. This popular Summer amusement palace is to open every afternoon as well as evening, which opens May 29, and its Whirlwind Band will find many novel features to please the dancers.

LOEW'S COLUMBIA THEATRE

On Monday Mae Allison will be seen in "The Walk Off" in addition to "Mother and I," which will have the pleasant Shirley Mason. Amateur performances will be the feature of Tuesday. On Tuesday Mary MacLaren will be seen in "Rouge and Riches," and Charles Ross will offer a new novelty to all star vaudeville in the evening.

NORUMBEGA PARK

Carl Alberta is rapidly concluding his arrangements for the opening of the twenty-fourth season of Norumbega Park, the favorite amusement place of Greater Boston during the warmer months. Mr. Alberta, returning as manager of the park after the absence of three years, announces that Norumbega will open this year on Saturday, May 22.

WARDHURST

"Wardhurst," the beautiful dining place, personally managed by "Hap" Ward, of Lynnfield, is already doing a mid-Summer business despite the rainy weather which has prevailed this Spring.

RELAY HOUSE

The noted Relay House at Bass Point, Nahant, where the broiled live lobster originated, opens for the sixteenth season, Saturday, May 29, the first time in the history of this famous eating place of the North Shore that it will be open here this season. Bowles' famous Blacks and White Jazz Band will preside.

"THE RIVER'S END"

An unusual and quaint form of plotting is one of the features in many interesting features of Marshall Neilan's latest picture production, "The River's End," from a story by James Oliver Curwood and distributed by First National, which will have its initial showing here at Tremont Temple on Monday, May 17.

CODMAN SQUARE THEATRE

Mary Pickford, the darling of millions of motion picture lovers, will be shown at the popular Codman Square Theatre, Dorchester, during the coming week in the beloved old story, "Pollyanna," which has delighted countless hosts.

IRISH TENOR WILL MAKE DEBUT HERE

The Boston debut of Emmet O'Toole, the young Irish tenor from Galway, which occurs at Tremont Temple next Saturday night, has attracted much attention among the Irish organizations, because O'Toole is an active worker for the Sinn Fein, both in Ireland and the United States. O'Toole joined the Irish volunteers when they were organized, became a member of the revolutionary society, the Sinn Fein, when its first meeting was held in Galway city, and was on the match to aid the Dublin revolution with the Galway man when the movement was crushed by the leaders as hopeless.

O'Toole has sung in many parts of Ireland. He is said to have a glorious tenor voice. He sings in the Gaelic language as well as English. Such popular songs as "Soldiers of Erin" and "Nifety-Eight," are his favorites. He will have the assistance of Majoris Daley and F. D. Illingworth. O'Toole's program is as follows:

Modern Songs
"Lalla Rookh".....McMorrough
Songs in Gaelic
"South Agra," "Miles Aroon," "Men of the West."
Irish Songs
"Dublin's Fair City".....Lover
"Believe Me".....Moore
"Minnie Macree".....Hall
Patriotic Songs
"Nifety-Eighty".....Doyle
"Soldiers of Erin" (The Soldiers' Song).....Kearney Herbert

GORDON'S GREATER BOSTON THEATRES

One of the thrilling scenes of "In Old Kentucky," the First National big special feature with Anita Stewart starring, which will be shown this week at Gordon's Greater Boston theatres, is where Miss Stewart rushes into a burning barn to save a thoroughbred mare from the flames. A barn was purchased and was burned to the ground.

Miss Stewart, as Madge Brierly, the little mountain girl, has been visiting in a nearby city. She is very much in love with the young master of the estate, but has been told by a jealous woman that the young man is playing with her heart. She slips quietly out of the big house to return to her mountain home. But as she leaves the grounds she sees that the barn is on fire.

This remarkable feature will be shown for the entire week at Gordon's Olympia, Scollay Square Olympia and the Gordon's Grand Street Theatre, and on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday only at Gordon's Central Square Dorchester Theatre.

WALDORF THEATRE

The management of the Waldorf Theatre announces the engagement of "The Girls From Happyland," a somewhat different musical company. Presenting complete scenic productions beginning next Monday, this company is headed by the well known comedians, Gus Mortimer and Happy Harry Moore, as Murphy and Ahle.

The opening bill will be "the tuneful and merry musical melange, "A Night in Bohemia," Miss Deborah Thornton, "prima donna"; Daisy Mosher, Babe Miller, Miss Ellis, the wife with soubrette and cyclone buck and wing dancer, and Rose Hughies, the petite singing and dancing comedienne, make an imposing aggregation.

LOEW'S ORPHEUM THEATRE

Jollity will prevail for the coming week at Loew's Orpheum Theatre with a program of many Boston favorites has been arranged by the management. Mae Murray, Richmond in "Cabaret De Luxe" will appear in a number of fast and dancing production with Marie Parker, Maurice La Varre and Jack Powell. The rest of the cast of eight people will offer something new in the musical line. Dorothy Ward will offer a fantastic acrobatic and pianologue. Eddie Heron & Co. will appear in one of their original comedy, "The Traveling Man," which is said to contain an abundance of humor.

MODERN AND BEACON THEATRES

Wallace Reid in a new screen comedy, "The Dancing Fool," will be the attraction at the Modern and Beacon Theatres commencing Monday. The photoplay is said to present the star in a role that is unusual and that ideally suits Mr. Reid's buoyant personality.

Bebe Daniels plays the role of Janet, and Raymond Hatton, Tully Marshall and Lillian Leighton are also in the cast. The picture was adapted from a popular magazine story by Henry Payson Dowst. Sam Wood directed.

Emily Stevens, who has been missing from picturedom for some months, has finally been persuaded by Abraham S. Schomer to return to star his new drama, "The Sacred Flame," which will be the other feature.

Richness of the Sea

EVERY ton of sea water contains one grain of gold. There are over four thousand million tons of water in a cubic mile, and the oceans are estimated to contain 300 million cubic miles of water. Thus it is easy to reckon the amount of gold in the sea. It is about ninety thousand million tons.

THE YOUNG DIANA

Story of Tense Mystery in Which Heroine Holds Key to Youth

By Marie Cozelli

"I FALL to see it!" she said. "To me it all seems waste—wanton, wicked waste. Man lives in some wrong, mistaken way—the real joy of life must be to dwell on earth like a ray of light, warming and fructifying all things unconsciously—coming from the sun and returning again to the sun, never losing a moment of perfect splendor!"

"But, to have no consciousness is death," said Dimitrius. "A ray of light is indifferent to joy. Consciousness with intelligence makes happiness."

She was silent.

"You are well?" he asked gently. "Perfectly!"

"And happy?"

"I suppose so."

"You cannot do more than suppose? People will hardly understand you if you can only 'suppose' you are happy!"

She flashed a look upon him of disdain which he felt rather than saw.

"Do you expect people to understand me?" she demanded. "Do I wish them to do so? I am as indifferent to 'people' and their opinions as you are!"

Saying a Great Deal

"That is saying a great deal!" he rejoined. "But—I am a man—you are a woman. Women must study conventions——"

"I need not," she interrupted him. "Nor should you speak of my sex, since you yourself say I am sexless."

He was silent. She had given him a straight answer. Some words from a great scientist from whom he had gained much of his own knowledge came back to his memory:

"To attain true and lasting life, all passions must be subjugated—all animosities of nature destroyed. Attraction draws, not only its own to itself, but the aura or spirit of other things which it appropriates to its use it is able. And this appropriation or fusion of elements is either life-giving or destructive."

He repeated the words "This appropriation or fusion of elements is either life-giving or destructive"—to himself, finding a new force in their meaning and application.

"Diana," he said presently, "I am beginning to find you rather a difficult puzzle!"

"I have found no for some time," she answered. "But it does not matter. Nothing really matters."

Love a Delusion

"Nothing?" he queried. "Not even love? That used to be a great matter with you!"

She laughed, coldly.

"Love is a delusion," she said. "And no doubt I 'used' to think the delusion a reality. I know better now."

He turned the helm about, and their boat began to run homeward, its lateen sail glistening in the moonlight like the uplifted wing of a sea-gull. Above them, the snowy Alpine range showed white as the tips of frozen waves—beneath, the water rippled blue-black, breaking now and again into streaks of silver under the full moon.

"I'm afraid you have imbibed some of my cynicism," he said, slowly. "It is, perhaps, a pity! For now, when you have come to think love a 'delusion,' you will be greatly loved! It is always the way! If you have nothing to give to men, it is then they clamor for everything!"

He looked at her as he spoke and saw her smile—a cruel little smile.

"You are lovely now," he went on, "and you will be lovelier. For will I can tell, you may attain an almost maddening beauty. And a sexless beauty is like that of a goddess,—slaying its votaries as with lightning. Supposing this to be so with you, you should learn to love,—if only out of pity for those whom your indifference might destroy!"

She raised herself on her elbow and looked at him curiously. The moonlight showed his dark, inscrutable face, and the glitter of the steely eyes under the black lashes, and a wan shadow of melancholy upon his features.

"You forget!" she said—"You forget that I am old! I am not really young in the sense you expect me to be. I know myself. Deep in my brain the marks of lonely years and griefs are imprinted—of disappointed hopes, and cruelties inflicted on me for no other cause than too much love and constancy—those marks are ineffaceable! So it happens that beneath the covering of youth which your science gives me, and under the mark of this outward loveliness, I, the same Diana, live with a world's experience, as one in prison,—knowing that whatever admiration or liking I may awaken, it is for my outward seeming, not for my real self! And you can talk of love! Love is a divinity of the soul, not of the body!"

"And how many human beings have 'soul,' do you think?" he queried, ironically. "Not one in ten million!"

The boat ran in to shore and they landed. Diana looked wistfully at the rippling silver light on the water.

"It was a beautiful sail!" she said, more naturally than she had expressed herself for many days. "Thank you for taking me!"

She smiled frankly up into his eyes as she spoke, and her spiritualised loveliness thrilled him with sudden surprise.

"It is I who must thank you for coming," he answered, very gently. "I know how keenly you are now attuned to Nature—you have the light of the sun in your blood and force of the air in your veins, and whether you admit it or not, you enjoy your life without consciousness of joy! Strange!—but true!—yet—Diana—believe me, I want you to be happy!—not only to 'suppose' yourself happy! Your whole being must radiate like the sunlight, of which it is now in part composed."

She made no reply, but walked in her floating, graceful way beside him to the house, where he took her to the door of her own apartments, and there left her with a kindly 'good-night."

"I shall not see very much of you now till the evening of the twentieth," he said. "And then I hope you will not only pray for yourself, but—for me!"

CHAPTER XIX.

THE fated eve—eve of the longest day in the year—came in a soft splendor of misty violet skies and diffidly glittering stars—after lovely hours of light and warmth, which had bathed all nature in radiant Summer glory from earliest dawn till sunset. Diana had risen with the sun itself in the brightest of humors without any forebodings of evil or danger resulting from the trial to which she was ready to be subjected, and when Madame Dimitrius came up to spend the afternoon with her as usual she was gayer and more conversational than she had been for many a day.

It was Madame who seemed depressed and anxious, and Diana, looking quite charming in her simple gown of white batiste with a bunch of heliotrope at her bosom, rather rallied her on her low spirits.

"Ah, my dear!" sighed the old lady—"If I could only understand Fedor—but I cannot! He does not seem to be my son—he grows harsh and impatient—this wicked science of his has robbed him of nature! He is altogether unlike what he used to be when he first began these studies—and today the reason I am sad is that he tells me I am not to come to you any more till the afternoon of the twenty-fifth—five days!—it seems so strange! It frightens me——"

"Dear, why be frightened?" and Diana smiled encouragingly. "You know now what is going to do—and you can see for yourself that he has partially succeeded! I'm quite pleased to hear that you are coming to see me again in five days! — that shows he thinks I shall be alive to receive you!"

Madame Dimitrius looked at her in a scared way.

"Alive!" But of course! Surely, oh, surely, you have never thought it possible——"

"That Science may kill me?" Diana finished, carelessly. "Very naturally I have thought it possible! Science sometimes kills more than it saves—owing to our fumbling ignorance. And I wonder—supposing Dr. Feodor makes sure of his discovery—supposing he can give youth and beauty to those who are willing to go through the experiment—I wonder whether it is worth while to possess these attractions without any emotional satisfaction?"

When a Girl Marries

OF COURSE I didn't discuss Phoebe and Neal with Val Cosby.

It was such a strange, delicate situation that I hardly dared let myself think about it, much less talk it over with anyone. Jim made it evident that he didn't want to go into the matter. I couldn't go into the matter. I couldn't go to Phoebe and say anything like this:

"Now, Jim has driven Envy into throwing Neal over. He's free again. If he wants to come to you I suppose you'll take him back."

Yet, what could I say?

No matter how deliberately I handled the situation, no matter how gently I approached it, anything I ventured to Phoebe would amount to just this declaration. I couldn't go near Phoebe. And when it came to Neal, for once in my life I simply couldn't bring myself to go to my brother and offer advice or comfort unless he asked for it. I couldn't intrude.

Yet I didn't see how they were going to find each other again unless they were helped. Could proud young Neal go to Phoebe and ask her to take back Evelyn Mason's rejected suitor? Would Phoebe make one little gesture to encourage Neal?

I thought in circles for a day or two. And then I decided to go for help to the kindest, sanest person I could reach—Anthony Norrers. If Betty had been in town she would have helped me. Failing Betty, Tony was the one person I could turn to. So I telephoned him and asked him to stop in for a cup of tea in the late afternoon.

It wasn't until he actually arrived at a little after four and I was handing him his sugarless tea, pale with cream, that I realized I had gone around in another circle. I couldn't ask Tony's advice, after all. His friendship I was entitled to, because it was mine whether or not I did anything about it. And however he resented Tony, I felt Jim was beginning to understand that. But I couldn't ask his advice about Jim's little sister. I spoke up honestly—if ruefully.

"Tony, I've dragged you in from the country on a wild goose chase. I wanted to ask your old in a matter that needs—straightening out. But I And I can't."

"Can't straighten it out? You can't ask me for help?" asked Tony, his tender smile warming those ice-blue eyes of his.

"Can't do either," I confessed, more and more ruefully.

A Wild Goose Chase.

"And little fairy godmother Anne loves—fixing things," said Tony in a non-committal tone.

It occurred to me suddenly that any other man would have protested that I hadn't dragged him to town on a wild goose chase, but that just seeing me was reason enough for the trip. And I was thinking how much I liked Tony for never even dreaming of saying it, when he startled me by his next words:

"Anne, since this is a matter you can't discuss with a chum like me, perhaps it is a matter you have no right to touch. Sometimes even loving interference stops a kettle from boiling or a rose from blooming."

"What have you guessed, you wizard?" I demanded.

"Guessed, little kind-heart, that you may be agitating yourself over something that will come right if you just leave it to me—to good Old Dame Nature."

"Meaning, 'Anne don't butt in on other people's business, as you're altogether too fond of doing?' Of course, you put it very sweetly, Tony. But it comes to that," I said, somewhat pinued.

Tony's wonderful deep voice soothed me, though again he didn't protest or deny.

"Words are colorful things, Anne. The wrong ones are curt. The right ones gentle. You are a Kindheart. If it hadn't been for you, probably Terry wouldn't have his Betty today. Sometimes I think you're going to help Virginia find happiness again. But don't wear yourself out over other people's problems. Nor over your own—if you have 'em. Remember old Tony will always be happy and proud if you give him a chance to stand by you. Your friendship is a wonderful gift. I'm an old hulk, Anne, but I feel as if there were garlands over the broken timbers when I think I mean something to a beautiful soul—like you."

A Real Gift

"Oh, Tony," I cried, more deeply touched than I dared to show. "Your friendship is a real gift. I'll always cherish it."

Tony laid his left hand over mine for half a second. Then he rose. And I noticed that though his lips smiled his eyes were sad.

"That's the best life can give me, Anne," he said quietly. "Your friendship." After a moment he added, "Your friendship—Betty's, Terry's, Virginia's. Just to think of you—all—pulls me out of the slough of despond whenever I tumble in."

"Are you ever sad, Tony?" I asked in astonishment. "Let me know when you are, as I know you'd help me."

"I'll help you whenever you ask, Anne," said Tony in a voice that I knew was a vow, and then he added strangely, "You do help me when I'm sad. Be sure of that. Perhaps you may be helping the people you longed to aid today—helping them by your loving thoughts and desires."

On the very words, and before I could puzzle over Tony's utter solemnity, I heard Bertha opening the front door in answer to a ring of a moment or so before. Then there was the murmur of voices, a rush across the hall and in another moment the doorway framed two figures, smiling, blushing, coming to me and standing shyly awaiting my response.

"Phoebe-Neal!" I cried and again just that: "Phoebe-Neal!"

Then I rushed across the room fairly babbling my joy even while the unwelcome, unbidden tears surged up to my eyes. A second later they were tangled up in my arms together.

Together! Together—that was the glorious, wonderful, unbelievable thing come true under my happy eyes.

However much he wanted to eliminate himself, Tony couldn't escape, for we blocked the doorway. After a minute Neal recovered his poise and detaching himself, crossed the room to Tony, who stood a lonely figure, but smiling his blessing.

Welcome Home

"Norreys, old man," cried slangy young Neal, rather poetically, 'give me a welcome ve been a long journey. Home." "Welcome, chap from wars an journeyings," replied T with an altogether satisfactory twinkle in his eye.

He gave Neal a fine rousing thump on the back, and then came to Phoebe and me.

"I—about to depart—salute you, little Miss Phoebe," he said with kindly understanding. I've seen nothing at all of you since the good old days when we were great chums, and the little girl used to kiss Uncle Tony good night nine—wasn't it? A very protesting and protested against nine, too."

"I'll kiss you again!" cried Phoebe. "Dear, dear Uncle Tony, what a dear you are to forget the day you came to lunch and read us Betty's letter about happiness, and I broke down and ran away like a jealous little fool."

Her eyes sought Neal's as she spoke. And there was enough happiness there to make up for a million other unhappy times.

"Dear me, I am getting old," laughed Tony. "I had forgotten, Terry's, Virginia's. Just to think of you—all—pulls me out of the slough of despond whenever I tumble in."

"Phoebe Kisses Tony.

Then, stooping, he laid his left hand lightly on Phoebe's hair and laid his lips very gently to her forehead. But Phoebe rose on tiptoe and flung her arms around Tony—and she kissed him on each cheek, on forehead and then on his lips. Very lightly, like flower petals, her lips touched him.

"A four-leaf clover, Uncle Tony, for happiness and luck."

From Thin to Plump—Girls

The expressions of happiness and gratitude of several of the young ladies patients for whom he prescribed the recently announced flesh-forming tonic known as three-grain hypo-nuclans tablets is evidence of a physician in one of the medical publications, and it seems as a surprise to the ordinary layman to learn the heart throbs of distress which seem to effect so many young people who are abnormally thin. Also is know that the weight can be materially increased by the use, regularly during two months, of this remarkable flesh-creator-ation, now obtainable in the usual apothecary shops in sealed packages with complete instructions for self-administration.—Advertisement.

Interesting Serial by Ann Lisle

Tony, without a farewell glance, murmured his good-by and hurried away.

"A prince of good fellows. The salt of the earth," said Neal, and added mischievously, "What do you say to our having him for one of the others at the great event, little lady?"

Phoebe blushed and buried her face against my shoulder. And though I was aching with curiosity as to how all this had come to pass, I just held out a hand to each and asked never a question beyond, "Any one care for tea?"

Neal threw back his head and shouted. After a moment Phoebe joined him, and, exchanging a glance, they seemed to consent mutually to something I didn't understand, and falling upon me, they dragged me down on the couch between them. Then:

"Tell her, Neal!" commanded Phoebe.

"All right," said Neal, eagerly. But, pulling himself up short, he corrected himself gallantly. "No, you, dear."

"I'd rather it was you," said Phoebe, shyly, and slipped down into the nest my left arm made for her.

"Habbsie, old lady, I suppose you wonder how it happened?" queried Neal, and, without waiting the affirmative nod of my head to encourage him, he went right on and told me.

"I've been moping around the office for a couple of days that seemed like a couple of years. Wondering and wondering all the time how I could find out if Phoebe still cared. And breaking a brain cell to figure out how I'd never stopped caring—even when I hadn't any right to. Gee whillikens! It was fierce!

"Then, this morning when I got to the office there sits Pat Dalton at my desk. And he hits out from the shoulder. Man-talk. Once or twice I got pretty hot under the collar. Once or twice I felt pretty cheap. And more than once or twice I was about ready to kick my senior partner out of the place. But at the finish I got pretty darn sorry for him. And when he left I sat mulling over the last thing he'd said. This is what it was:

BRIDGET

THE quaint name of Bridget, so often in modern times associated with domestics, is in reality one of the most poetic of feminine names, emerging from a romantically and religiously splendid epoch. It is said to come from Brigit, which means strength, and had its origin with Brighid, the daughter of the fire-god and the Erse goddess of wisdom, song and poetry.

Copyright by Harris & Ewing

"Bride was their Queen of Song, and unto her They prayed with fire-touched lips."

Brighid has been a favorite in Ireland since early times and was one of the first few Keltic names to find popularity in Europe. Her vogue there is explained through the story of the maiden who was brought up by a bard and afterward became a pupil of St. Patrick and from a solitary recluse at Kildare became head of 500 nuns and was consulted by a synod of bishops. She was highly revered and did much good work, and when she died a copy of the Scriptures too beautiful to have been written by mortal hands, was found in her cell. The ancient Bridget's Bell, which used to ring in church towers, was so-called in honor of her, but the title was suppressed by Henry V. However, She has always been a patron saint of Ireland, and Saint Bride's or Bridget's churches are common in England and Scotland. Brideswell was once the palace of St. Bride, and after it became a prison its name was used as an equivalent for all jails.

Portugal has a Dona Brites, which it honors as St. Bridget, and Sweden claims a St. Bridget or Birgetta. One Swedish Brigetta, a lady of noble birth, who founded an order of Brigettin nuns and made a pilgrimage to Rome, gave Bridget votive throughout Scandinavia. There is a popular Norse song called "Bright dinn Ban mo stor" (Bridget, My White Treasure), and another Bridget is preserved in romance since her blind lover is said to have recognized her by the touch of her hand after twenty years.

Bridget's jewel is amber, which preserves her bodily health and gives her immunity from contagion. Friday is her lucky day and two her lucky number.

Home a Social Centre

By Loretto C. Lynch

THERE is a young girl in my neighborhood and I have come to feel so sorry for her. For she lives in a beautiful house, yet she has no home. And she wears the most beautiful clothes. I have seen girls whose folks must exact almost all their weekly earnings in order to make ends meet stand as Edna passes by and envy her wonderful fur coat and her becoming hats and all the expensive gewgaws that go toward making the female of the species attractive. Yet Edna is very poor in some ways.

Of course, she did not choose her mother, and the one that was given her has never seemed to realize that her home is, after all, the fundamental social centre. And the more nearly ideal one makes this social centre, the higher she has climbed on the ladder of civilization. But Edna's home is a shelter from the elements; in it the family hunger is supposed and clothes are washed and beds are made and a museum for collecting furniture and the like is maintained.

But, dear Edna, to bring the boy or girl friend to spend an evening? Horrors! why that would mean letting someone "know your business." It would mean a temporary upsetting of the family muséum, the parlor. It would mean the burning of the light for an extra hour or two. And, who knows, someone might get a spot on the pale pink carpet, sealously guarded from intruders these twenty long years.

If the women who decry the fact that they are just housewives and long to get out into the great wide world to do, it's say social work, would but realize the opportunity, they really possess right in their own homes. People everywhere are in need of "mothering."

What a shame for Edna's mother to miss the glorious opportunity to serve that the Fates have given her. Just think how in the fine distant future some woman may come along who will make of this house a home, now realizing, perhaps, that once it harbored a lonely little Edna who has possibly married one of these good for nothing boys and see her entertaining on the cold street corners when we come home late.

Then there is another side of making home the social centre. Do you make husband feel you are most annoyed if he has dared to have "the boys" drop in for a smoke or a chat or a friendly game? And do you have a dose of the sulks if the thoughtless company drops cigar ashes a bit carelessly?

The woman who realizes that the home should be a social centre selects appropriate furniture that can be used with no great degree of hesitation. It may not be very beautiful, although anything that is useful is in its own way beautiful, but it is useful. There are comfy rockers and a table or two with well-placed lights. And some of the lights may be shaded with pretty shades but before all the furniture and comforts I place the SPIRIT of the housewife toward making her home a social centre. She should want to do it.

Judgment by Experience

At the local club the conversation had got on the topic of the English language, its uses and abuses.

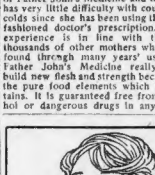
"Have you ever noticed," said one man, "how food people are apt to use garden phrases when speaking of a woman. Her cheeks are always 'roses,' her hands are 'lily white,' her eyes are 'violets' and——"

"You've forgotten one," broke in the man with the sour face, who had hitherto been silent.

"Which one?"

"Her tongue. It's a scarlet runner."

"RALPH HAS RECEIVED MUCH BENEFIT FROM TAKING FATHER JOHN'S MEDICINE"



This is the way that Mrs. Anna Carbone, 38 Julian St., Lynn, Mass., begins a recent public statement. She adds that she has been a constant user of Father John's Medicine and that she has very little difficulty with coughs or colds since she has been using this old-fashioned doctor's prescription. Her experience is in line with that of thousands of other mothers who have found through many years' use that Father John's Medicine really does build new flesh and strength because of the pure food elements which it contains. It is guaranteed free from alcohol or dangerous drugs in any form.

MARKET HURT BY RAIL REPORTS

Rumors of Strike and Roads' Financial Troubles Cause Depression

By BROADAN WALL.

Reentered U. S. Patent Office.

New York, May 8.—Wall Street was flooded with pessimism yesterday to such an extent that old traders brought some stocks in the afternoon. The feeling was so desperate it could not possibly be true. The stock exchange authorities of the country were in angry conference over a plan to save the business of the country from the new stock tax.

The head of the National City Company ventured the opinion that the banks could not finance the railroad needs of the year. Labor interests presented a memorial stating that the corporations of the country had profiteered to the extent of billions since the war began.

There were rumors of a real railroad strike to come by way of emphasizing the demand for increased wages and the railroad managers let it be known unofficially that no one could strike and ruin the country for all they cared. There was no hope anywhere.

Stocks were heavy at the opening and continued their downward trend in the afternoon by which time the average losses were about 2 per cent. A moderate buying movement began which caused a rally of about a point. Atlantic, Gulf & West Indies and Virginia Coal advanced about eleven points from the low. Then somebody discovered that a large bank had loaned $6,000,000 of time money for sixty days at 8½ per cent. This being the first large amount of time money put out since the first of April, it cheered the street up and the close was in the midst of a fairly good rally.

BROKERS TO OPPOSE STOCK TRANSFER TAX

New York, May 8.—Practically all of the important local and commodity exchanges of the country were represented at the conference at the New York Stock Exchange to consider plans to defeat the heavy tax on security and commodity sales proposed at Washington. The conference adopted a resolution, offered by Colonel J. W. Pratt, who represented large wire houses, to organize committees in principal cities for the instruction of the public as to "consequence to be apprehended from proposed legislation." It is said that if the New York, London and Montreal the principal markets for American securities will halt capital investments in American enterprises.

Stock exchanges were represented by the following conferees: A. M. Almstead, Louisville Stock Exchange; E. E. Thompson, Washington Stock Exchange; Frederick W. Freeman, Columbus Stock Exchange; Walter Mouro, Buffalo Stock Exchange; S. J. Fouse, president Providence Stock Exchange; W. R. Cumming, Cincinnati Stock Exchange; Fred Counties, former president of the Chicago Stock Exchange; J. H. Puelicher, president and C. W. L. Johnson, Governor of the Baltimore Stock Exchange; Frederick H. Semple, President St. Louis Stock Exchange; E. J. White, vice-President New York Curb Exchange; P. W. Wrenn, President Boston Stock Exchange; John B. Harbour, President Pittsburgh Stock Exchange; J. A. Emery, counsel National Association of Manufacturers, Washington; Charles A. Otis of Otis & Co., Cleveland Stock Exchange; E. R. McCormack, chairman New York Curb Market Association; W. S. Silkworth, President Consolidated Stock Exchange of New York and Edward Flash Jr., President New York Produce Exchange.

EUROPE IN GREAT NEED OF PETROLEUM SUPPLY

European consumption of oil for years to come will be limited only by the amount obtainable for export, experts. When H. D. Frigeauf, of Henry L. Doherty & Co., returned from an investigation tour of England, Belgium and France, he said:

"The only limit on European demand for oil is fixed by transportation facilities. Petroleum products in Europe, particularly of gasoline, fuel oil and lubricating oil, have not yet begun to get back to normal. Competition from continental sources is cut off and will likely be negligible for some time to come because of the breakdown of the transportation system for serving Russian and Rumanian fields. When regard to future consumption, it is significant that automobile construction in Europe is likely to be on a larger scale than ever before."

PACKING HOUSE ISSUES LOWER

Prices Recede During a Dull Boston Session; Curb Market Is Weak

Stocks were weak in Boston on the whole. The market was fairly firm at the start, but prices eased off quickly and the market remained heavy to the end. But there was some improvement in the afternoon. Packing issues were weak and continued to feel the pressure. Eastern Steamship was a bit stronger, selling at a new record highest. Greenfield Tap attained its highest since listed. Eastern Steamship transactions constituted the most. Other issues to show a little activity were Boston & Maine, Ventura, Swift & Co. and Libby. Trading was dull, however. Transactions for the entire list aggregated less than 20,000 shares.

LIMITED PRUP WAS WEAK.

United Fruit showed the largest loss, dropping six points on one transaction. Punta Alegre was off 2¼ at the end, Swift & Co. 3½, Swift International 1¾ and Libby International Products 2¼. United Drug, St. Mary's Land, Utah Copper and Mohawk receded from one to more than three points. Carson Hill and Elder finished with fractional losses.

Boston & Maine fas up 1. International Cotton Mills 2, New Haven common 3 and Eastern Steamship preferred 1, while smaller gains were made by North Butte, Gray & Davis and Ventura.

CURB TREND REACTIONARY.

The Curb had a reactionary trend and was not quite so active as during the preceding session. Nearly half of all the turnover was represented by trading in Arizona Extension, Boston & Montana and Silver Reef. At the close the ratio of losses to gains was almost two to one. Oilfields was strong among high-priced oils. Mutual Service advanced 20 cents and Boston & Montana was a trifle higher.

Among declines were Simms Petroleum ½, Iron Cap ¼, Consolidated Coppermines 1⅛, Chief ¼, Canada Mexico ¼, Arizona Silver 3 cents, Texana 2 cents, Superior Oil 2 cents and Sunburst 10 cents.

Cotton Markets

New York, May 8.—Liverpool buying contributed to an advance of 16 to 30 points when the cotton market opened today. Unfavorable weather and demand for July by spot interests were other factors. The list subsequently lost most of the advance. Prices were:

Bankers Strive to Relieve Credit Structure Strain

American bankers are making as strenuous and patriotic efforts now to alleviate the strain upon the country's credit structure as they offered during the war to finance its needs, and there are signs that they are making progress. This service is neither advertised nor appreciated by the public, but it is of the utmost value in safeguarding the welfare of the nation. As to the situation, the following statement is from an institution that is doing its share of the work:

Wise Discrimination Required of Banks

The Guaranty Trust Company of New York says:

A keener appreciation is manifested by the bankers of the necessity of discriminating among borrowers. In such discrimination there is every hope of a wise contraction of the funds. There is likewise a keener appreciation of the importance of the railroad situation in the credit market. The now wanting strike of switchmen and other railroad employes has merely emphasized the seriousness of the car shortage brought about by the failure to maintain equipment during the years of government management. Country elevators are holding large amounts of grain, and terminal elevators are filled with grain sold for domestic use or for export, but on which nothing can be realized prior to delivery. It is estimated that there are 69,000,000 bushels awaiting movement, or the equivalent of 45,220 cars. The opening of transportation on the Great Lakes will undoubtedly improve matters, but there will be no real relief until the railroads are in better condition.

It is hardly to be hoped that the present tendency toward conservatism in making loans will effect an assessment of credit immediately. Whatever restrictions may be imposed upon speculators, the legitimate demand for funds will still be heavy. Throughout the country building operations are feeling the effects of the credit scarcity and any increase of supply will simply bring on a demand that would hold rates up. In addition, many productive enterprises planned to take advantage of the opportunities which the world situation offers for the development of new business of the enduring kind, are being held back until the current stringency passes.

Aside from these obvious features of the situation there is the fact that it is just as difficult to apply a root and branch treatment to the business of this country, so far as credit is concerned, as it would be to restrict taxes on business profits during the last two or three years. Credits are in the hands of those who originally made them. A whole system of new industrial and commercial enterprises has grown out of the initial credit operations, and these must be sustained if our present prosperity is not the effect of causes that have been operative over a term of years, and to make changes in it requires not only an understanding of those causes, but also considerable skill and patience in bringing them again under control, to say nothing of eliminating them.

Value of Central Electric Station Bonds

Regarding increased appreciation of late in the value of the bonds of central electric companies, Henry L. Doherty and Co., of New York say that they are being picked up by discriminating investors, regarding the present status and future of this industry this house states:

The figures of operations of the central station companies of the country for 1919 are almost staggering in their immensity, stations in the United States in 1919 generated 38,550,000,000 kilowatt hours of energy and employed over 1,000,000 men. This current was carried over more than 57,000 miles of high tension transmission lines, serving, in addition to the many industrial plants, more than 5,000,000 homes with light and supplying light and power to more than 1,000,000 business establishments. Over 5,000,000 electric motors were in use at the end of the year and the average combined daily output of the central generating stations was 105,700,000 kilowatt hours, with an average combined daily revenue of $2,115,000.

It is estimated that there yet remain in the United States 14,000,000 houses to be wired for electric light, 150,000 industrial establishments to be equipped with electrical power and a possible electrical furnace load of more than 375,000 kilowatts. With a steady increase in population and industrial growth in this country, the future field for central station generating companies may be said to be practically unlimited and the only question before the central station generating companies of the country will be their ability to supply the demands which will be made upon them within the next few years.

Normal and Prosperous Times Ahead Of U. S.

There is no note of pessimism in the statement as to the outlook by J. S. Bache & Co. of New York. This house says in its weekly review:

The commercial world, which has not for several years been troubled about money, is now beginning to feel the strain in credit produced by the action of the Federal Reserve banks in restricting loans all over the country. This, naturally, has produced uneasiness all through the business world, as it always does when the banks draw the lines seriously on loans. An opportunity has been afforded for pessimistic rumors and talk of panic, and these have had the effect of helping along the downward reaction in the stock market. Developments in the investment situation are favorable, but the effect of these and other constructive symptoms have not been given much, if any, weight, as is customary when a professional market is interested in bringing about further liquidation.

Rises of any importance in the stock market are brought about by bullish prospects for the future. At the time like this, with great problems unadjusted and many things arranging and changing, the outlook is uncertain. Confirmed views as to the outcome must necessarily be hazardous. One readjustment after another must follow until the constructive forces assert. During this period markets are liable to reactions and recoveries, with the trend, for the time being, influenced by events or probabilities.

It is impossible to believe that with the commanding position in resources and in business activity, the country will fail to work successfully toward normal conditions and satisfactory material prosperity.

Industrial Boom Has Been Overdone

In commenting upon the decline in the market valuation of stocks and bonds when business is so good that industrial companies are earning 10 per cent. on their capital, and 15 per cent. on common stock, A. J. Johnson & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange, express the opinion that the industrial boom has been overdone. This house says:

Simple reasons why the more business to do than there is money available to do it with and the cost of new capital has become so high as to be almost prohibitive. At the present time it is doubtful, indeed, whether capital invested in plants and inventories will be turned over enough to cover the interest and sinking fund charges required to raise the capital itself. This condition results logically from the increase of 121 per cent. since 1914 in the value of the aggregate output of our industries; for the available amount of working capital to handle this production has not correspondingly increased. So in all lines the increase has been drawn so low that the banks are necessarily so cautious in their financial accommodation, and that bank loans are so much greater in comparison with either reserves or individual deposits to be entirely consistent with safety and conservatism.

Overalls Movement Is Of Great Significance

Expressing the opinion that manufacturers of luxuries are about to experience a diminution of profits, R. H. MacMasters & Co., brokers, belonging to the Consolidated Stock Exchange of New York, also remark:

Briefly, we believe that the significance of the overalls movement is great and that its effects will be widely felt. It is safe to say that one of the fads which grip the American people every now and then. The overalls movement is based on a great consequence, but its significance lies in that it indicates the waning of the fad spirit against the charging of prices based on the psychology of the average man. The curtailment of buying in the dry goods and other lines is based on the opinion that inflation has at last outdistanced wages. In all likelihood, the curtailment of expenditures now beginning will extend to many phases of industry.

REALTY MEN DEPLORE HIGH BANK INTEREST

High interest rates on savings deposits go with higher interest rates on mortgages, and this accounts for the view expressed by realty men in the following resolutions:

PARK THEATRE

"Who's Your Brother," the new Curtiss Pictures Corporation production, featuring Edith Taliaferro, "daughter of the rich and sister of the poor" will be the attraction at the Park Theatre next week, beginning Monday. "I Am My Brother's Keeper" is the title of the photo drama.

In one of the dark corners of the old world, lived a happy family. In a massacre of race hatred mother and son were killed, while the father and daughter escaped. Here in America Esther Field and her father find a refuge and give all their time to the poor and unfortunate. Esther has two suitors, one a brilliant young surgeon, Dr. Morris, and the other, a returned soldier, Robert Graham. Young Graham has been wounded in the head, and is subject to spells of fainting. Dr. Morris presses his suit, but when Esther hesitates, he takes it that she does not love him, and departs. It is well known that Morris and Graham are intensely jealous of each other. Graham is overcome by a fainting fit while driving his car, and plunges over an embankment. There is only one doctor who can restore the boy's reason, and he is Dr. Morris. Then comes the great human theme of "Who's Your Brother."

LOEW'S GLOBE THEATRE

The program for the coming week at Loew's Globe Theatre, Washington street, near Boylston, will be headed by Bessie Barriscale, the girl of golden hair and brown eyes, in "The Notorious Mrs. Sands." It is the story of a young and beautiful girl who is forced into a loveless marriage with a man much older than herself.

NON-UNION BREAD IS BANNED IN HAVERHILL

Haverhill, May 8.—With the union clerks, cooks and waiters refusing to handle non-union bread and supporting the striking bakers, voted by organized labor in Haverhill, the strike situation here has assumed a most serious aspect. A complete tie-up of bakeries, stores, restaurants and eating places is now threatened. The Kelleher bakery has signed with the striking bakers, making a total of five shops now working under union agreements.

Another Great Bible Lecture
THE
OF
THE AGES

By H. W. COLBY
Franklin Union Hall
Berkeley Street
(Near Tremont)
Sunday, May 9th
3 P. M.

In our day, when the great industries of earth are organized for highly efficient work, to succeed with well laid plans, the question is often asked: "Is the drama with the human family done God work systematically?" Is it executed with a prearranged and well defined plan?" So, we believe it is! plan? How long has it been in operation and what is the objective? How does it affect the human family—past, present and future?

Come and hear this question answered from the scriptural viewpoint and in a way that will satisfy your longings and renew your faith in God's word. The acts are free. No collections.

MEASURES THAT WOULD CURE MOST OF THE TROUBLES AND TENDENCIES WHICH DISTRESS AND ALARM US TODAY

(1) To nominate for the Presidency by direct nomination and to elect by popular vote.
(2) To elect the Cabinet officers and make them responsible to Congress.
(3) To deprive the President of the power of patronage; to put all public offices as nearly as possible under Civil Service, and have appointments made by a committee of Congress.
(4) To elect Federal Judges, including the Supreme Court Justices, by popular vote.
(5) To apply the Initiative, the Referendum and the Recall to national matters.

Pre-Publicity Censorship of Films Violation of Constitutional Rights

Those who advocate the bill for the censorship of moving pictures reported out by the Legislative Committee and now taking its readings in the Massachusetts House of Representatives are building worse than a great many of them understand. Of course, there may be strikers who advocate the bill for the purpose of being bought off, but a great majority of those who advocate it outside of the Legislature itself are honest, well-meaning and, unfortunately, intelligent people. It is not often that a bad measure has advocates, a majority of whom are well meaning and intelligent. This sometimes makes it all the more difficult to oppose the bill.

Nevertheless, it will be a most unfortunate thing for American democracy if the principle of pre-publicity censorship, contained in the pending bill, should receive sanction by a legislative enactment. Pre-publicity censorship of moving pictures is as much a violation of the constitutional and sacred right of free speech and free press as the censorship of the newspapers or censorship of our conversations could be, and it will do as much or more harm.

Our forefathers realized that the worst tyranny in the world was the tyranny based upon the control of newspapers and of the right of our citizens, orally and in writing, to criticise men and things clothed with the public interest.

The struggles for liberty have turned around the attempts to destroy and protect the liberty of the agencies capable of moving public opinion. Whenever a new agency like the moving picture arises by the advance of arts and sciences with great power to move public opinion, it ought to be protected by the same constitutional guarantees which protect the freedom of the press and the freedom of speech.

Let us assume that the moving pictures need to be kept more clean and wholesome. There are effective ways of accomplishing this result without destroying a great principle and putting in the hands of reactionary elements a power to control what some day is going to be a greater instrumentality for moving public opinion than the newspapers. Twenty million people see moving pictures every day.

The Legislature ought to feel some responsibility for our ancient rights and not to deal with them lightly. It is perfectly easy to accomplish the objects which the good people behind the pre-publicity censorship bill want to accomplish and yet not to destroy a great principle of constitutional liberty.

If those who advocate the pending bill will only give this a moment's consideration, we are sure that those of them who are not in it for illegitimate ends will be glad to substitute for this measure a bill which will clean the moving pictures if they are unclean and yet will not destroy a vital principle.

Remember that the pre-publicity censorship exists only in several of our States and has existed only several years there and that the power of the moving pictures to affect public opinion on public questions has only been recently disclosed. Yet in this short time in these few States we have such evidence of the baleful effect of pre-publicity censorship as this: namely, in Ohio the censorship board refused to allow a picture to be published which showed a great manufacturer who gave ostentatiously to formal charities and yet who ground the faces of his workmen, because it tended to excite the workingmen against employers; in Pennsylvania certain German interests succeeded in stopping, through the censorship board, the great film, "The Battle Cry of Peace," which was doing so much to arouse this nation to the necessity of military preparation. One of our public commissions in Massachusetts used the pictures to show to our people the conditions under which children were compelled to work in some of our factories. Immediately there was an agitation to stop it. Had we then had a pre-publicity censorship board, is anybody foolish enough to believe that it would not have been stopped?

League of Nations Project Failure From the Start

The Council of the League of Nations has sent a special invitation to the Government of this country asking that it send representatives to the interallied financial conference to be held soon in Brussels.

One of the paragraphs well down in the text of the invitation reads as follows:

Because of the importance of the United States in the domain of economics and finance, the Council of the League of Nations hopes sincerely that the Government of the United States will desire to seize the occasion to send representatives of the country to the conference or to associate itself with the work.

And the last paragraph adds: "The cost of each delegation is to be defrayed by the country represented."

If this country had accepted Mr. Wilson's League covenant and the Treaty of Versailles there would have been no need of inviting us to accept the burdens of Armenia as our own.

We would instead have been told to take them, and if we had objected, the fingers of half a dozen European diplomats, who know better than anybody else what the documents contain, would have been pointing to the page and line containing provisions which they would have told us obligated us to do as they said.

What a mercy it was that there were men in the Senate wise enough to see the dangers into which the League of Nations proposals would lead us.

What a splendid thing it was that they were brave enough to break party ties and even personal friendships and withstand the most persistent political pressure in maintaining their continued and finally conclusive opposition to what they knew was unsafe and wrong.

If they needed any vindication aside from their own sense of right-doing it is furnished by the almost daily evidence that the reason we were wanted as participants in the League was that our power and resources were needed by the European imperialists to carry out their plans of selfish intrigue and profit.

If old Mr. Aesop was alive what an excellent fable he could write of the hungry foxes who formed an association and invited the farmer's fattest goose to become a member. It would doubtless conclude "Hsec fabula docet—the business which most needs minding, and which it is best to mind, is one's own."

Talk, or Action Take Your Choice Use the Postoffice And Save Money

—By Arthur Brisbane—

(Copyright, 1920.)

Could any part of government machinery reduce the high cost of living?

It could. Below you shall have proof of it.

Cost of everything is increasing by cost of distribution. Distribution is the most expensive item in our national life.

In this country only one distributing agency works efficiently, economically, thoroughly, free from disturbance of strikes, and that is the government-owned United States postoffice.

When sugar costs wholesale, at the refinery, 14 cents a pound, the average citizen pays from 25 cents up, and is lucky if he can get what he needs.

Evidently it costs about 10 cents to move a pound of sugar from the refinery to the citizen.

In this column it was suggested that the government parcels post might distribute sugar. In reply to the suggestion published there has been received from the Postmaster-General and from his fourth assistant, Mr. Blakslee, communications which you may read. They interest every citizen.

Very sincerely yours,
(Signed) A. S. BURLESON,
Postmaster-General.

You will learn that the Franklin Refinery in Philadelphia sold to Wagner & Company of Washington thirty thousand pounds of sugar, the government carried it. The cost at the refinery was a trifle over 14 cents a pound. The government charged a fraction over 1 cent a pound for delivery. The sugar delivered cost 15.3 cents a pound, including government charge for carrying it.

After you have read the communications that follow, you will know that if the government would organize it and if the people had brains enough to insist upon it, the postoffice distributing system that the people own, could distribute sugar and other necessities of life direct, at a minimum cost.

Milk and bread also could be delivered to consumers by the postoffice at a great saving.

There has been much talking. Here is an opportunity, if the people choose, to do something. They will find in the Postmaster-General, Mr. Burleson, and his assistants, eager co-operation, a desire to make the postoffice useful to the utmost limit.

These communications are recommended especially to the attention of the editors of the country, particularly the thousands of odd ons of small newspapers that go to the farms. They have influence, more than the newspapers in big cities.

From the Postmaster-General:

April 26, 1920.

My dear Mr. Brisbane—I want to thank you for your letter of the 22nd inst., and the clipping therewith submitted relative to the feasibility of the distribution of sugar by the postal service.

Attached hereto is a memorandum addressed to me today by the Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General on this subject.

Very sincerely yours,
(Signed) A. S. BURLESON,
Postmaster-General.

From Mr. Blakslee, fourth assistant postmaster, communication addressed by him to the Postmaster-General.

Postoffice Department.
Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General.

April 26, 1920.

Postmaster-General—The marked copy of the New York American of Saturday, April 17, 1920, forwarded to you with a personal communication from Mr. Arthur Brisbane, dated April 23, is another illustration of the continued endeavor of Mr. Brisbane to encourage the use of the parcel post facilities of the postal service as a means of conveyance.

Within the past ten days 30,000 pounds of sugar was mailed by the Franklin Refinery in Philadelphia to Wagner & Co., Washington, D. C. An additional 20,000 pounds will be shipped today and tomorrow.

This sugar was sold at the refinery at 14.2 cents per pound. The parcel post rate of 1.1 cents per pound made the price delivered to Wagner & Co., 15.3 cents per pound. Some of this sugar was sold to our postal employes at 19 cents per pound, whereupon the postoffice department store requested a quotation on 15 tons, or 30,000 pounds, from the refinery, and was advised that the price had increased to 17.7 cents per pound at the refinery and that our order would have to be placed through Sloane & Brockett, sugar brokers, for the refinery in this city, who under the present system, in turn distribute the product to Wagner & Co., and one or two other firms, who act as commission merchants, and who, in turn, distribute to D. P. Collins, Wilkins & Co., Grove & Price, and various wholesalers, who then distribute to retailers.

These several operations and the incidental costs and profits necessary to the conduct of brokerage, commission houses, wholesalers and retailer enterprises, result in a price of approximately 23 to 25 per pound, delivered to the ultimate consumer.

Naturally, if there was but one set of middlemen involved and the distribution accomplished through the existing facilities of the postal service from refinery to middlemen, thence direct to ultimate consumer, the total supply of sugar to consumers in the city of Washington, could be delivered at 15.3 per pound, plus a fair margin of 3 to 3 a pound—a net saving of an approximate average of 4 per pound to every consumer of sugar in this town. It being assumed that the bulk sugar would be forwarded exactly as it is now shipped and that the breaking up of the 25 and 100 pounds sacks, in which it is forwarded from the refinery, into the small units required in the average household, would be performed by the middleman or distributor, and the one postage rate that applied at the point of original shipment would be sufficient to cover the cost to the domicile of the ultimate consumer.

Under such circumstances the postal facilities would not be burdened with any other operation except that of conveyance or movement, and consequently could not be charged with Socialistic intent to engage in or interfere with established commercial custom.

This is the theory upon which we have asserted that many staple articles, such as milk and bread, could be transported and delivered to consumers at a vast annual economy to the people of the country and at the same time at a reasonable return to the postal service.

It is indeed encouraging to note the interest of Mr. Brisbane in this matter, for it is certain that, with his assistance, this department could sufficiently impress the general public with the fact that the postal service is the only instrumentality of conveyance or transportation in existence in this country which is in direct contact with every purchaser and every consumer daily, and all that is necessary for its complete development is that certain restrictions, such as the limitations placed by Congress upon the use of motor vehicles in rural territory, the false system of compensation prescribed by Congressional action, which is based solely on miles of highway traversed, regardless of whether any weight or quantity of mail is carried, should be removed, and thus permit the maximum use to be made of the available facilities of the postal service in the movement of foodstuffs, commodities and merchandise.

This should result in the reduction of the cost to consumers in many instances as high as 40 per cent. on certain necessities, at the same time giving the producer thereof no less than is now received and, in many cases, considerably more return than appears at present, while thousands upon thousands of tons of matter that waste in the fields, could be saved.

(Sgd.) JAS. I. BLAKSLEE,
Fourth Assistant.

What you have read, so far, is not as exciting as the story of the man who killed his many wives. The girl that mysteriously disappeared. The two-headed calf, or the other events that usually attract our attention. But for those that take seriously the situation of the country, the living problem of fathers and mothers, there has been printed nothing more important than the above, showing that intelligent use of postoffice distributing power would result in a reduction of the cost to consumers, in many instances as high as 40 per cent. on necessities.

We have the machinery. Why do the people allow selfish interests to prevent its being used?

These 32,000 58 Per Cent. Behind in H. C. L. Race

THE State of Massachusetts has 32,000 employes on its payroll.

From July 1, 1914, to January 31, 1919, the cost of living in Massachusetts increased 93 per cent. The average increase in pay of State employes in that time was only 24 per cent. Thousands of Bay State families are looking anxiously to next Tuesday, when the crisis in the situation is reached at a hearing at the State House.

The Boston Sunday Advertiser tomorrow will publish a story detailing facts which are of importance not only to these 32,000 employes but also to the taxpayers of the State.

One group of employes seeks a bonus of from 10 to 25 per cent. of last year's salary. Another group of 8,000 demands a 20 per cent. increase in this year's salary for themselves and nothing for the other 24,000. Supervisor of Administration Thomas W. White, the State's head employer, opposes both plans and has decided views of his own.

Other angles of the situation are that many employes are quitting the service for more money elsewhere and that a bonus system might cost the taxpayers $1,500,000.

For many years, while little girls and their elder sisters all over the world were admiring and envying Mary Pickford, the little film star was not having such a wonderful time of it after all. First general knowledge of her domestic troubles came a short time ago, when she obtained a divorce from Owen Moore, subsequently marrying Douglas Fairbanks, like herself a star of the screen.

When Miss Pickford testified in her own behalf she told a story of marital unhappiness which is remarkable in many ways. This story, told first-hand before the divorce judge at Minden, Nev., appears exclusively tomorrow in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

"If there ever was a time for honesty in politics that time has come," says William Jennings Bryan in the fourth of his pre-convention articles, written for the Boston Sunday Advertiser. "The masses in all parties are patriotic and anxious for the best things to be done, but the voice of the masses must be expressed to be controlling."

Mr. Bryan deplores the fact the Republican party is making its fight over men and not over platforms.

New England will pay thirty cents a pound for its sugar within a short time. Already that price is being charged in many cities, while governmental authority seems powerless to prevent the upward soar. Read the facts in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Liquor is being sold freely and comparatively cheaply in Boston. Those who "know the ropes" have not as yet been seriously incommoded in obtaining their usual supply of drinks.

The Boston Sunday Advertiser has conducted a searching inquiry into the liquor situation in "dry" Boston.

"Mary Elizabeth," the tea room genius of Boston, New York and Atlantic City, is to be the mid-Summer bride of Henry D. Sharpe, Providence multi-millionaire and Rhode Island's wealthiest bachelor. The Boston Sunday Advertiser will print the full story of the romance that has chagrined and shattered the hopes of Providence and Newport society dowagers.

Many fond mothers have for a generation turned their eyes longingly toward the handsome face and figure and the millions of Sharpe, the manufacturer Croesus, but all in vain.

A half million Jewish settlers must be placed in Palestine at once if the Zionist movement is to be a success declares Max Nordau, characterized by Israel Zangwill as the most eminent Jew in the world.
